

GERMANY REFUSES TO HOLD PARLEY WITH FRANCE; BORAH URGES PROTEST AGAINST FRENCH POLICY

MEDIATION OFFER MADE TO GERMANY BY ITALIAN HEAD

Not Willing to Participate in Parley Unless Britain and Possibly U. S. Are Represented.

TIME NOT YET RIPE, OPINION IN ENGLAND

Germany Also Declines to Take Part in Any Discussion Until France Evacuates Ruhr.

BY FERDINAND JAHN

United News Staff Correspondent.
Berlin, January 22.—Germany refuses to participate in any reparations mediation parley unless Great Britain, and possibly the United States, are represented.

Chancellor Cuno Monday rejected the mediation offer of Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, on the ground that it would be useless to discuss reparations and the Ruhr situation unless all the signatories of the Versailles treaty were present at the conference.

SAY FRANCE MUST WITHDRAW

Cuno, in his communication to Mussolini, also stated that Germany would refuse to negotiate as long as the French maintained their army of occupation in the Ruhr.

The government, it has become known, is raising a fund for the Ruhr strikers, which will be distributed by the industrialists of the section. Trade unions have issued a proclamation approving the attitude of the workers of the Ruhr. The proclamation encourages further passive resistance to the French occupation and assures that help will be forthcoming.

Although the German government has not been officially advised of the proposed revised French reparations plan, it is not anticipated that the scheme will meet with much favor in governmental circles here.

Proposal of France.

France plans to recommend to the reparations commission that Germany be granted a two-year cash moratorium on condition that it raises an internal loan of 3,000,000,000 marks. Five hundred million of this amount would be retained in Germany for stabilization of the mark and the remainder turned over to the allies.

Germany, according to observers, is in no mood now to accept any plan which France may offer and it is pointed out that it would be difficult to raise a loan in Germany, the proceeds of which are to be turned over to France.

Furthermore, it is believed that Germany will resist France's proposal.

$2,010,683 BUDGET ADOPTED MONDAY BY SCHOOL BOARD

No Pay Increases Voted Except Those Provided in Regular Length-of-Service Schedules.

Many Recommendations of Finance Committee Referred to Future Meeting of Board.

BY FERDINAND JAHN

United News Staff Correspondent.
Atlanta, January 22.—The school board today adopted a budget of $2,010,683 for the coming year. The budget provides for an increase of approximately $170,151 in school maintenance figures over 1922, included in the new 1923 finance sheet submitted by the finance committee, and adopted Monday afternoon at a special meeting of the board of education. A total of $2,010,683.25 is listed in the new sheet, which was based on expenditures amounting to $1,832,531.84 in 1922.

Owing to increased costs of maintenance, including additional teachers, extra labor, and a general year trend of operating supplies and equipment, no salaries were raised as was generally anticipated, except for teachers and principals whose service records entitled them to a 25 per cent increase under the prevailing service schedule.

Salaries Biggest Item.

Of the total amount apportioned in the budget sheet, $1,641,090.86 is listed under the head of salaries. This includes costs of maintaining the administrative, directors, principals and teachers, janitors, regular and extra labor in the department.

Other items listed and the amounts apportioned for the year are as follows: Office supplies, $3,550; school supplies, $80,517.41; repairs and replacements, $76,857; equipment, $59,005.41; new buildings and grounds, $25,193.31; and miscellaneous, $123,889.26, making a grand total of $2,010,683.25.

The finance committee of the board, consisting of W. L. McCalley, Jr., chairman, and W. Hoke Blair, W. W. Gaines, Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, C. L. Trussell and J. T. Hancock, in submitting the new finance sheet to the board, recommended a number of increases in the salaries of certain principals, and stated that an assistant superintendent was essential to aid Superintendent Willis A. Sutton in caring for the increased duties of the schools. Miss Mary W. Postell, elementary supervisor, was recommended for the new place, which would carry an increase of $11.50 per month in

REV. PERCY GRANT DELAYS HIS REPLY TO BISHOP MANNING

New York, January 22.—The Rev. Percy Stickney Grant, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Ascension, late today wrote Bishop William T. Manning, asking for further time in which to prepare his formal reply to the bishop's demand that he publicly avow belief in the divinity of Christ or resign from the ministry.

Dr. Grant reiterated in a sermon yesterday his disbelief in this tenet of the church, first publicly expressed a week ago, and pleaded for an "unshackled clergy," thus leading his friends to a strengthened conviction that he would force the issue of a trial for heresy.

CROWELL DENIES CONSPIRACY PLOT IN CAMP BUILDING

BY HENRY L. STIMSON

Washington, January 22.—Benedict Crowell, war-time assistant secretary of war, pleaded not guilty in the District of Columbia court today to the indictment recently returned against him and six others here charging conspiracy in connection with the construction of army camps.

Henry L. Stimson, who was secretary of war in the cabinet of President Taft, appeared as counsel for Mr. Crowell and also issued a statement in which he declared the charges brought against his client were "preposterous." It would be a sorry precedent, Mr. Stimson added, if the war work of men like Mr. Crowell were rewarded by suspicion and dishonor.

Crowell's Statement.

Mr. Crowell in presenting his plea reserved the right to withdraw it within thirty days and substitute for it a motion to quash the indictment. His statement follows:

"I am charged in this indictment with having joined a gigantic conspiracy to conceal and parcel out the entire building program of the war department during the late war. The charge is that I was engaged in such a plot to make money out of my position at the expense of the nation and that by so doing I obstructed the proper conduct of the war—even as the indictment says, to the producing of the sickness and death of soldiers.

"The facts are that I never profited one cent by the trust imposed in me by the country. No such conspiracy

Southern Chain Refuses to Show Arbuckle Films

New Management Announces Ban on Work of Rappe Case Principal.

"Fatty" Arbuckle films will not be exhibited by theaters in the southern states under the supervision of the Southern Enterprises, Inc., according to announcement Monday by the public relations office of the company.

This was decided after advice of better films committees and other organizations representing the public throughout the south had been sought and considered.

Theaters in Atlanta controlled by Southern Enterprises are the Howard, Lyric, Forsyth, Kialto and Strand. The chain of houses operated by the concern extends throughout Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

New Interests Control.

Control of the Southern Enterprises officially changed hands Monday when the transaction whereby S. A. Lynch transferred his interest in the organization to the Famous Players-Lasky corporation was formally closed.

Washington, January 22.—Congress will probably have forty-two more working days and then a long, long rest of nine months' duration. This is the outlook in the case, according to most of the political physicians.

Four appropriation bills, one rural credits bill and possibly two subsidiary bills comprise the only work congress intends to complete before it goes on its rest cure.

Constitutional amendments, two important congressional investigations, labor legislation and a merchant marine act, commonly known as the ship subsidy bill, might well be considered during the forty-two days between now and March 4, but the patient does not intend to tackle these tasks.

Jim Watson, senior senator from Indiana, has laid down as the course of treatment, "Maximum speed and minimum legislation," and the patient seems willing to pursue this course.

Therefore, William G. McArdoo, notwithstanding the patient seems set to draw his mileage books—at 20 cents a mile—March 4, leaving the following record behind him:

2. The rural credits bills, of which the first, the Capper bill, has just been passed, and the second, the Leavenworth bill, will probably be introduced late this week. The two subsidiary bills are the Capper truth-in-fabric bill and the Voigt-Ladd bill.

Woman Invades Royalist Office; Kills Reporter

Anarchist Believed to Have Been Implicated in Her- rick Home Bomb Plot.

Paris, January 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—Papers found in the possession of Germaine Berthoin, 20-year-old woman anarchist, who today shot and killed Marius Plateau, reporter of the royalist newspaper L'Action Francaise and wounded herself slightly, lead the police to believe, they say, that she was implicated in the bomb explosion in the Paris home of Myron T. Herrick, American ambassador, in October, 1921.

The police say the papers also indicate that she was an associate of Gustave Bouvet, the anarchist who last July shot at A. Nadin, prefect of police, believing him to be President Millerand. Bouvet was sentenced to five years' imprisonment January 8 for this crime.

Plateau besides being one of the reporters on L'Action Francaise was also the leader of a newspaper association known as the King of Camels, a band of young royalists prepared to render any service such as selling a royalist newspaper at any place or meeting where its opponents were demonstrating.

The association members also would go in a body to a theatre or motion picture house to protest against a performance that displeased them by opposing the doctrines for which they stood.

Suppression of Fireworks Urged to Prevent Tragedies of Children—Want Laws Enforced.

An international conference to cope with the drug evil is recommended to President Harding in resolutions passed by the Atlanta Woman's club at a meeting Friday at which resolutions were also passed urging laws prohibiting sale of fireworks and demanding strict enforcement of laws governing use of bright headlights on automobiles and controlling the smoke nuisance.

The enormous increase in drug trade in America is cited by resolutions as indicating a need for controlling the "rapidly growing menace" at its source, the poppy fields of India and the coca plantations of South America. The only recourse is a conference in which all nations will participate, the resolutions imply.

MAX NORDAU DIES AT HOME IN PARIS

Famous German Author and Philosopher Lived in Poor Circumstances During Last Days.

Paris, January 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—Max Nordau, the famous German author and philosopher, died at his home here today.

Nordau has been ill for a long time. At his bedside when death came were his wife and his daughter, Maxa.

Max Simon Nordau was born at Budapest July 29, 1849, of Jewish parentage. He practiced medicine in Budapest until 1880, when he went to Paris. There, in addition to his medical work he studied art, literature and social questions.

His notable works include "Degeneration," "Conventional Lies of Mankind," "Paradoxes," "Paris Under the Third Republic" and a Jewish play, "Dr. Kohn."

In 1897 Dr. Nordau was called by Dr. Herzl, founder of political Zionism, to aid Herzl in propagating the Zionist idea. From the first Zionist congress at Basel in 1897, and several succeeding congresses Nordau's survey of Jewish conditions in all lands was regarded as the keynote address of those gatherings. His interest in Zionism continued unabated to the last, although he gave up active leadership during the years following the world war, both by reason of the state of his health and because of disagreement with some of the policies of the present leaders. Nordau always favored a more aggressive policy, protesting that modern Zionism gradually was losing sight of the first principles as enunciated by Herzl.

The declining days of the noted Zionist and philosopher were hard. He continued to live in poor circumstances. Owing to illness he ceased writing more than a year ago. He left unfinished a big work on philosophy.

OFFICERS OF COAL WORKERS BELIEVE AGREEMENT NEAR

Union Leaders Say They Expect, Possibly Today, to Sign Contract for Tri-State Field.

GOOD PROGRESS MADE, REPORTS JOHN LEWIS

Mine Operators of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, However, Not as Optimistic as Workers.

New York, January 22.—(By the Associated Press.)—Union leaders declared tonight they expected "soon"—possibly tomorrow—to sign a new wage contract covering the tri-state competitive field, and thus remove all possibility of a bituminous coal strike after April 1.

Mine operators of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, with whom the labor men have been in conference here since Wednesday, were not so optimistic. An agreement might be reached tomorrow, they said, but the signing of the contract might be delayed for days, or even weeks, up to the very date, more than two months hence, when the existing contract expires.

Lewis Makes Statement.

The only official statement today, made by John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, and concurred in by Phil H. Penna, Indiana operator and joint chairman of the negotiations, was:

"The subcommittee (miners and operators), which has been conferring since Saturday on terms for a contract acceptable to both sides, is making progress, and may have something to report tomorrow.

Sponsors for the statement declined to indicate what points were being discussed; to reveal what demands had been made by the miners; or to disclose what counter proposals, if any, the operators offered. Other members of the subcommittee confined themselves to predictions that the new contract would be for one year instead of two, as sought by the miners.

What concessions the operators offer to gain the union's consent to a one-year agreement were kept within

At Trial of Son Father Admits Killing Woman

Shot Was Fired Accident- ly in Struggle Over Gun, He Claims.

Memphis, January 22.—A jury in criminal court here which is to decide the fate of John W. Hudson, Jr., Whitehaven, Tenn., dairyman, on trial for murder had before it tonight the task of deciding whether Hudson, who denies having committed the crime, or his aged father, who declares he was holding the pistol at the time the fatal shot was fired, was responsible for the slaying of Mrs. Hattie B. Ferguson, with whom the younger man is alleged to have been infatuated.

Testifying as a witness for the defense the elder Hudson brought the trial to an unexpected and dramatic climax today with the declaration that at the time Mrs. Ferguson was mortally wounded he was in possession of the pistol which the woman had given him a moment before, but that his son and Mrs. Ferguson were struggling with him for it and that the bullet was fired accidentally.

Hudson said he came upon his son and Mrs. Ferguson in a woods. "She handed me a pistol and said: 'Daddy, take this and kill us both,'

SILENCE OF U. S. ON RUHR INVASION HIT BY SENATOR

"Ruthless Militarism" Is Laid to France by G. O. P. Member of Foreign Relations Committee.

Washington, January 22.—French policy in the Ruhr was attacked as "ruthless militarism," a violation of the armistice terms and the treaty of Versailles and an "offense against humanity," in a statement issued tonight by Senator Borah, of Idaho, a republican member of the senate foreign relations committee. Senator Borah also criticized the state department in what he said was its policy of silence and inactivity and declared the United States should at least declare its attitude by formally protesting against the French policy.

"It Is This Rule Which Distinguishes the Savage From Civilized Nation," Declares Senator.

"This is a situation," said Senator Borah, "in which the United States cannot with honor remain silent. The first duty of a nation is to protect its life when assailed and its highest honor and glory in victory is to be just to a fallen foe. It is this rule which distinguishes the savage from the civilized nation.

"It was American principle announced by President Wilson upon which the armistice was signed and it was upon these principles that Germany laid down her arms.

"It was our soldiers that made possible the defeat and disarming of Germany.

"According to these announcements and principles we declared officially and many times that with the German people, as a people, we had no quarrel but a feeling of sympathy and friendship. In other words, we furnished the soldiers, the principles upon which the armistice was based which resulted in disarming and rendering Germany helpless, and we also made definite and certain pledges as to the treatment of Germany. After all that takes place and at a time when Germany has been disarmed, and rendered powerless, her territory is invaded, military rule is established, all of which will bring in its wake indescribable suffering and untold misery to the German people, as a people, and in addition to that, great financial and economic loss to our own people.

"Even before the invasion took place this government had been advised by its own representatives that great suffering must obtain in Germany throughout the winter and that thousands of women and children must die of starvation. The action of France accepted that condition.

"In other words, we see the German people turned over to the most destructive and ruthless method of barbarism, part arbitrary power, and we do not so much as record our protest. Certainly we cannot be silent under such circumstances. We should, when we saw this thing coming—and it has been perfectly apparent for many months that it was coming—have called a conference and sought through honorable and peaceful methods to avoid this crisis—adjust the economic problems involved—which would also have given us an opportunity to make clear and positive our views upon such a policy as now obtains. But this we declined to do.

Did Not Suggest Plan.

"We did not even, as a matter of fact, suggest to France in a way that would have been taken notice of, any plan whatever. We remained silent and inactive without a policy or program when the interest of humanity and the most vital economic interests of our own people called for us to make a pronounced and unmistakable effort to bring the powers concerned into a conference for adjustment of the questions involved. But certainly it ought not to be permitted for the world to look upon us as conniving at this program by our silence. It is wholly different from a case in which we had had no part in the war or in the conflict. We would declare our attitude, our position, and our policy—this is the very least we can do and we should do very much more.

"The action of France is in my judgment without authority under the Versailles treaty. It is a defiance of international order and peace. It is an offense against humanity. What she is doing will not bring compensation but it will bring supreme suffering, not only to the Germans, but to the people throughout Europe and incalculable loss to our people."

"Come on, Girls, It's Fine," Girl Reporter Says of Her First Airplane Joy Ride

Miss Fischer follows City's "Flying Mayor" Aloft in McMullen's "Flying Farmer."

"Wonderful sport!" was the enthusiastic remark uttered by Miss Grace Fischer, a "flying mayor" following a flight over Hapeville, Ga., in the airplane of Mayor Walter A. Sims, which was piloted by Miss Grace Fischer, Constitution City girl reporter, took her flight at the same time, and below is her own account of the great adventure.

BY GRACE FISCHER.

I have flown and had the most wonderful experience of my life! No flight of imagination was this. I speak of, but Sunday afternoon from the Candler speedway at Hapeville, I flew aloft in an airplane with A. B. McMullen, and had the first high adventure of my life.

I yearn for another. Oh, the soaring upward, the utter glory of circling higher still and higher towards the broad, blue lift of the sky! I advise every girl in Atlanta, if she gets half a chance, to fly and fly and fly!

Uses Word Advisedly.

I say "girl" purposely, for so many persons, old youths and young, in Atlanta think that the air is no place for a girl. Do they think that she is up in the air enough as it is? When I was asked to go up, I murmured in true maidenly manner: "I thought that I might be scared, but when my friends got through with me, I was quite sure that I would be scared to the death."

Kindly individuals spoke of the horror of looking down from great heights, of how people they had known had been terribly frightened in a big crash to earth. Oh, the great risk! By the time my solicitous friends were through with me, my perturbation was assured. I was frankly frightened. I made my will and gave direction that I wanted to be cremated like "Wally" Reid, and have wild violets planted on my grave. My thoughts larked back to the days of my childhood in the Creole city of my birth and I was sure that my end was near!

On Sunday afternoon, by the time the car which took me to Hapeville reached the red dirt cliffs around the speedway, I felt for all the world like a squeezed wax rag. Mayor Sims was gallivanting with the clouds on high, and I had to wait until he came down. I stood first on one foot, then on the other. Around me were gathered several aero fans, a few of them friends from conference and paper, and the younger denizens of Hapeville—gaping and a little bit amazed. One of them had a shaggy, stupid looking donkey, and I longed to ride on it instead of in the airplane!

Like Facing Seafoal.

But the mayor came to earth and

Coal Mining Industry In Need of Competition, Asserts Charles Piez

Pittsburg, Pa., January 22.—Engineers should keep the "k" out of the engineering block and join the "new-fangled political bloc family to oppose aggressive assertion of selfish interests with sound economic reasoning and unselfish purpose," Charles Piez, former director of the United States Society of Western Pennsylvania here tonight.

Turning to problems which, he said, engineers might help solve, Mr. Piez said the two greatest difficulties facing the country are immigration and the coal mining problem. Congress, he added, should modify the immigration restrictions to let in a sufficient supply of immigrants who come here to work from countries which have furnished us with really excellent material for citizenship in the past.

The chief troubles of the coal mining industry, he said, are lack of free competition and an over-supply of labor.

There are 6,800 more mines than are actually needed to produce the nation's coal supply, he said, and a rule of the interstate commerce commission requiring the railroads to divide their cars among all the mines on the basis of their rated capacity keeps the low grade, inefficient mine with high overhead costs alive when free competition would drive it out of business.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR IN MARIETTA ELECTS

Marietta, Ga., January 22.—(Special.)—The Christian Endeavor of the First Presbyterian church of Marietta, at a recent business meeting, elected the following officers for the coming year: Fleming Comfort, president; Eugene Smith, vice-president; Milton McClain, treasurer; James Groves, recording secretary; Amanda Groves, corresponding secretary.

The following chairmen of committees were elected: Eliza Holmes, music; Theodore Holmes, missionary; Milton McClain, prayer meeting; Mary Glover Appleby, flowers; Harry Leake, social; James Petty, publicity.

The only intoxicating beverage used in Persia is home-made wine.

Above—Mayor Walter A. Sims preparing to "jump off" in Aviator A. B. McMullen's plane at Candler speedway. Below—Miss Grace Fischer, the Constitution City girl reporter, as she bids to earth the reluctant good-bye she describes in her story of her first airplane flight.

I was called forward. With a feeling, I am sure, akin to that of a man about to go to the scaffold, I slipped into the big aviator's coat and they put on my head the aviator's cap, buckling it tight under my chin. As I told Mayor Sims goodbye, I was told to look pleasant for the camera, they snapped me—a makeshift of a Pollyanna indeed—and I stepped onto Mr. McMullen's knee and thence into the back compartment of the machine where I was strapped in tight and told not to touch any of the brakes and wires. Truly and honestly, what a sinking feeling I had just before the motor started! The lively curiosity that I had experienced in anticipation disappeared entirely when I thought of the swaying insecurity that I would feel as the machine went up. I had qualms of dizziness, sickness, dread, and higher, but when I was in still on terra firma. That was when I was inexperienced, when I did not know the real joy of flying! I would start again now with an eager desire to be off! How foolish was the fright and the dread when unsuspected pleasures were in store for me!

As the whirling motor started and the machine pushed off over the ground and then rose slowly, I was in a state of amazement. Was I scared? Not in the least. The machine rose so gently, however, so lightly, that there seemed nothing in the world to be frightened about.

Above was the broad blue expanse of sky, lightened by fluffy white clouds. The sun was shining, the breeze, though not strong, was brisk and fluctuating, and it was good to be aloft above the earth! As the airplane rose higher and higher into the blue, I was filled with a sense of exhilaration. The higher we went the more exhilarated I became. I lost all idea of the petty things that come to everyone in life and felt the business and vastness of it all. Suppose it was dangerous—and as you can't run into anything up there, it is really not as dangerous as riding these days in an automobile in town.

Then we came down, finally and all too soon for me. I had been told I would have a lost feeling when we descended. For an instant there was a feeling of something pressing my heart upward towards my shoulders, but for an instant only. I felt no degree rushed as the machine slowed, and it was wonderful how quickly and smoothly we glided to the earth. I could honestly and sincerely greet the cheerful gathering crowd with a smile as the aeroplane sped over the red sand of the speedway to a standstill.

"It was wonderful!" I told Mr. McMullen, the remarkable aviator, who flies so certainly and easily, and as I thanked him for a glorious ride, I made up my mind that the most wonderful thing in the world—or should I say universe—is to fly upward and upward into the broad blue lift of the sky! I want to go again.

Knights of Columbus Offer Foes Opportunity To Win $25,000 Reward

New York, January 22.—The Knights of Columbus announced tonight that five awards totalling $25,000 would be paid to any person who could prove that the "fake oath" attributed to the fourth degree membership of the order, which is being circulated in Texas by anti-Catholics, is contained either in that degree or any other authentic ceremonial of the Knights of Columbus.

Luke E. Hart, supreme advocate, stated after a meeting of the supreme officers today, that the money had been deposited in banks in Texas. Thousands of copies of the alleged fake oath are being distributed in Texas, Mr. Hart said, and the money was offered in efforts to drive the circulators into the open or to cover, by the recent anti-Catholic feeling between Catholics and non-Catholics, especially in the south. He declared a conviction for criminal libel was obtained last week in a San Francisco court against a circulator of the "oath."

USE INTELLIGENCE WHILE TRAVELING, URGES PRESIDENT

New York, January 22.—American travel abroad should guard against unfortunate results from "unintelligent traveling," President Harding declared in a letter to the Travel Club, made public tonight with the announcement of efforts of such a travel show to be held here the week of April 9.

"I hope the travel club will keep in mind, as I know it has done in the past, that he would bring home with him the wealth of the Indies with him. I presume my quotation is bad, but I am sure the sentiment is good. Travellers who go abroad and find there only justifications for the prejudices and provincialisms they take with them are not likely greatly to benefit by their travels."

"I can not but feel in a time like the present we need to guard against unfortunate results from this intelligent kind of travelling. On the whole, undoubtedly, travel is a splendid means of education which can be made far more useful through the proper directed efforts of such an organization as the travel club."

The offices of assistant city attorney and captain of police were abolished. The office of "police commissioner" was wiped out and the old office of "chief of police" revived at a salary $15,000. The present incumbent, Commissioner Lucas, received from the council. Other cuts were made, most of them in the larger salaries.

Good Government Leagues Formed By Savannahans

Organization Meeting at City Auditorium Called by Seabrook Followers.

Savannah, Ga., January 22.—(Special.)—With a "standing room only" audience in the municipal auditorium tonight, the crowd being estimated at 4,000, a permanent "good government league" for Savannah and Chatham county was formed, with Judge A. B. Lovett, president; Mrs. Panchal Strong and F. Arthur Gordon, vice presidents; Miss Stella Aikin, secretary, and W. M. Hopkins, treasurer.

The occasion was called by Seabrook's leaders, but many who took part in the recent mayor's election, and not a few former Stewart supporters were present. The league was avowedly non-partisan and will not tolerate participation in any personal or party or faction fight.

Its objects are: To effect a bona fide, full registration list for city and county; to bring about conditions in which there shall be absolutely clean elections, with proper primary laws and election laws to handle illegal voting and rigging and buying and selling of votes; and to support fair and honest administration government.

GERMANY REFUSES MEDIATION OFFER

which is part of the new reparations plan, that Germany establish state monopolies in the following products: tobacco, matches, alcohol, salt, sugar and gasoline.

The government, it is believed, will look upon this proposal as undue interference with the internal life of the country. Also, the industrialists dealing in the above products, are bound to object because it would mean the confiscation of their industries.

According to advices reaching here from Mayence Monday, the court-martial trial of Fritz Thyssen and seven other industrialists who are charged with resisting France's occupation of the Ruhr, are to be held Wednesday.

Germans Are Exulting

Essen, Germany, January 22.—The Germans are exulting over the success of their policy of passive resistance in the French invasion of the Ruhr.

An official spokesman of the German government declared that events of Monday, during which railroad transportation was paralyzed and production crippled, indicated that the French were climbing down from their policy of drastic action. Release of several railroad telegraph and mine officials and the withdrawal of troops from several mines and railroad stations indicated, to the German authorities that France was weakening.

At the same time, the Germans declared they had carefully worked out a program of continued resistance and were prepared to meet any steps that were decided upon in the conference between Premier Poincare and Marshal Foch in Paris Monday.

No Coal Statement

French officials, in the meantime, refuse to state whether or not, in their opinion, any actual coal was obtained Monday for application to the reparations account against Germany.

The industrialists showed a slightly more conciliatory attitude during the day and stated they did not desire a general mine and railroad strike in the Ruhr area.

Although no definite statement was forthcoming concerning the scope of the strike in the mines and on the railroads, it is known that employees of collieries and carriers, officials of which had been jailed by the French, refused to work. In some cases, miners appear at the pits at the appointed time in the morning but refuse to work.

HIGHER STANDARDS IN RURAL SCHOOLS

State School Board Meets Today—Will Consider Raising Requirements for Licenses to Teach.

The state board of education will hold its regular quarterly meeting at the state capitol on Wednesday of this week at 9:30 a. m.

Among other important questions to be discussed will be a proposal for raising the standard of certification required of teachers in the public schools. It is understood that state superintendent Dr. A. M. Parks will advocate a gradual raising of this standard. It is pointed out that during the war, while teachers were hard to get, it was impossible to do anything in this respect, but that now, when the supply is larger, it may be advisable to make an attempt to inaugurate a trend toward higher qualifications.

Dr. Parks expressed the view Monday that, at present, in some of the country schools, it is too easy to get a first grade license to teach, with the result that in a number of instances very young, inexperienced teachers are employed side by side with better qualified ones.

It is expected that there will be a full session of the board, as all members have signed their intention to be present. Those on the board include Governor Hardwick, Chancellor D. C. Barrow, Dr. G. R. Glenn, Dr. E. J. Forrester, Dr. Rufus W. Weaver and Superintendent Parks.

Chamber Dinner Menu Recalls Obsolete Words

Ex-Presidents Gather to Mourn Over Past and Plan for Future.

BY LOY WARWICK, JR.

An interesting bit of gastronomic evidence concerning the glory of bygone days popped up at the luncheon held Monday by ex-presidents of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Attending the Volsteadian repast Monday were: Alfred C. Newell, president of the chamber; L. H. Beck, first president; Robert F. Maddox, Asa G. Chandler, F. J. Paxton, Wilmer L. Moore, Melvin R. Allen, E. Allen, W. H. White, Jr., S. C. Dobbs, E. R. Black, Lee Ashcraft, W. O. Foote and W. G. Cooper, and the evidence seemed to be the most serious at a dinner of the chamber in 1890, back in the days when a "menu" was a menu. It went something like this and should be rendered verbatim to the tune of "Sweet Adeline."

Menu of Olden Days.
"Blue Point Oysters and Haut Sauterne." "Haut Sauterne" by way of explanation for those who have forgotten or never knew, is wine—or rather, was wine.

"Bisque of Shrimp and Amontillado." (Everybody knows or has some idea of what shrimp preceded by the "bisque" is, but how many are well versed in the translation of the "Amontillado" part? Yes, that was wine, too.)

"Boiled Ogechee Shad and Chateau Lafour Blanch." (One doesn't even have to pronounce that last entry to appreciate its meaning. It's the kind of stuff that used to make diners successful.)

"Sweet Bread Patties and French Peas." (No wine.)

"Filet of Beef with mushrooms and string beans." (Nothing to drink there, either.)

That "Roman Punch."
"Terrapin stew, fricassee and Roman punch." (Many a "punch" was that little for which with this course the lucky diners were served "Veve" (Vinegar). The "Roman punch" was a chaser for the "Roman punch." Who knows, because one must remember that it was in 1890.)

"Canvas back duck with crosses and Chamberlain." (By this time everybody should agree that it was some dinner.)

"Biscuit, wine and Charlotte Russe." (No wine listed with this, but it's possible that they figured a little "chamberlain" would be left over.)

"Roquefort cheese and Bent's crackers." (And then came the last, but not least, "cordial Medec.")

That must have been some dinner. They had to drink that much wine to get that much dinner—and, of course, had to eat that much dinner to drink that much wine.

In 1890, Remember.
Members of the Chamber of Commerce were very anxious to make it plain that that much dinner—and, of course, had to eat that much dinner to drink that much wine.

In spite of the fact that the right hand column of Monday, 1923's menu had been somewhat different, ex-presidents enjoyed a delightful course luncheon, talks, cigars and coffee without the cordial-Medec.

It is the plan of President Newell to call together ex-presidents of the Chamber of Commerce and consult them on certain matters to be undertaken by the chamber. This will not be an advisory board, Mr. Newell said, but will be merely an advisory board. The judgment of the ex-presidents will be carried over to the board of directors by Mr. Newell, and it is believed that advice coming from those who have served in the capacity of president will greatly benefit the directors in matters under consideration by them. The meetings will be held quarterly.

Future plans for the chamber were discussed and all predicted one of the most prosperous years.

Committee on Honors.
President Newell appointed a committee, consisting of E. R. Black, Lee Ashcraft, F. J. Paxton, Wilmer L. Moore, Melvin R. Allen, E. Allen, W. H. White, Jr., S. C. Dobbs, E. R. Black, Lee Ashcraft, W. It went something like this and should be rendered verbatim to the tune of "Sweet Adeline."

Attending the Volsteadian repast Monday were: Alfred C. Newell, president of the chamber; L. H. Beck, first president; Robert F. Maddox, Asa G. Chandler, F. J. Paxton, Wilmer L. Moore, Melvin R. Allen, E. Allen, W. H. White, Jr., S. C. Dobbs, E. R. Black, Lee Ashcraft, W. O. Foote and W. G. Cooper, and the evidence seemed to be the most serious at a dinner of the chamber in 1890, back in the days when a "menu" was a menu. It went something like this and should be rendered verbatim to the tune of "Sweet Adeline."

HADASSAH CAMPAIGN FOR PALESTINE FUND

Local Chapter to Launch Drive for Quota of $5,000.

Atlanta chapter of Hadassah will soon launch a campaign for $5,000, its quota of the $450,000 to be raised by the Hadassah Medical organization throughout the United States. The organization administers to the sick of Palestine, maintaining a complete hospital system free to Christian, Moslem and Jew alike. In addition to its five hospitals located in Jerusalem, Haifa, Safed and Tiberias, it also maintains dispensaries, clinics, field hospitals, maternity and infant welfare stations, and is teaching the population greatly needed lessons in hygiene.

The personnel of the Hadassah organization is composed of over 400 doctors, nurses, sanitarians, dentists, pupil-nurses and other attendants. The task of maintaining the medical organization has become the burden of Hadassah, due to curtailment of the joint distribution committee contribution, the latter having been compelled to use its funds for relief work in the Ukraine. The World Zionist organization has to curtail its contributions due to the unsettled state of European money exchange.

The work of affording health and healing to the population of the Holy Land, Jews and non-Jews alike, which has been carried on for the past seven years, is consequently appealing to the generosity of the citizens of Atlanta, both Christians and Jews, since the work is non-sectarian, to help Atlanta raise her quota.

Mrs. Jacob Buchman is chairman of the campaign, and Mrs. L. Levine is treasurer and campaign headquarters are at 77 South Broadway street.

WARM AND RAINY DAYS ARE COMING, SAYS WEATHER MAN
It's a sad story, but nevertheless a true one, which C. F. von Herrmann tells about the weather. Mr. von Herrmann is the local weather forecaster and is in an advantageous position to know about such things. He says that the weather outlook for the week is "considerable cloudiness, with occasional rains with the beginning of the week, and a repetition of the same conditions with the ending of the week."

He also informs us that it will be cooler Tuesday, but not cool enough to freeze anything. A disturbance of moderate force was evident Monday morning off the Gulf coast near Galveston, accompanied by heavy rains in Texas, Galveston received over five inches of rain in 24 hours.

Warm weather prevails over almost the entire cotton belt. In the opinion of Mr. von Herrmann, the weather outlook for the week is "considerable cloudiness, with occasional rains with the beginning of the week, and a repetition of the same conditions with the ending of the week."

PROGRAM GIVEN BY MISS CROWE

Presents Two Members of Emory Glee Club With Miss Castleberry. Sings Four Numbers.

Listeners to station WGM last evening heard a splendid program when the Emory Glee Club, a group of four members, presented a program arranged by Miss Martha Crowe, a brilliant soprano of Atlanta, who is a pupil of Mrs. Annie Mae Taurman Norton. Miss Crowe was especially good in her selections last evening and the artists she presented were equally attractive.

Playing Miss Crowe's accompaniment was Miss DeMaie Castleberry, who has been heard frequently before from station WGM with Miss Crowe. Miss Crowe on her program last evening presented also two members of the Emory University Glee club, one of the south's best college musical organizations. These artists were Alton O'Steene, pianist, and Elbert Peabody, baritone.

Shown above are the artists who were heard on the program given at 6 o'clock Saturday evening from station WGM under the direction of E. B. Fox, pianist and director of the Colgate & Co. orchestra, of Atlanta. Those in the picture are, seated, from left to right: Miss Bertha Gibson, pianist; Mrs. S. B. Latham, dramatic soprano, and Mrs. W. E. Dawes, pianist. Those standing are, left to right: W. W. Hughes, cornetist; A. F. Macoun, tenor and pianist; E. B. Fox, pianist; M. M. ORDER IS PLANNED BY SUN YAT SEN

Shanghai, January 22.—(By the Associated Press).—Sun Yat Sen, ex-president of the southern republic, announced today that he would leave next Saturday for Canton, his former capital. Both foreign and Chinese interests have been urging him to go there to restore order. His adherents took the city from Peking nationalists last Wednesday.

GRECIAN ROYALTY IN EXILE ENJOYS BUS RIDING TOUR

New York, January 22.—When royalty is in New York they do as New Yorkers do.
Prince Andrew, recently banished from Greece, and his brother, Prince Christopher, took a stroll over Brooklyn bridge Sunday and then went bus riding on Fifth avenue.
Attempts to conceal their identities failed—they were frequently saluted by fellow countrymen.

HELP YOURSELF CLUB RACE IS UNDER WAY

today, let the spirit of appropriation possess you. Say to yourself, "I can win one of those awards!" As soon as you have said that, half the battle is won. The next step is to enter the club, and that is as simple as pie. Just write your name on the entry blank and send it to The Constitution Help-Yourself club. Think then what lies before you—the possibility of winning in ten weeks' time a $4,420 Packard, or one of the 34 other awards. If you miss the first award automobile, remember there are ten other automobiles.

Bountiful Awards.
Any one of the awards is a bountiful reward for a few weeks' effort, and besides being remunerative is pleasant, simple and educational. The smaller awards will go to those who take it more leisurely, but as for you—well, those cars are very handsome, and some one will drive away in each of the eleven. Other persons will leave The Constitution office with checks in their pockets, ranging in value from $250 down to $100.
The territory covered by The Constitution has been divided into eight districts, three in the city of Atlanta and five outside city limits, and to each of these districts has been assigned a complete set of awards consisting of:

One automobile.
One award of cash, $250.
One award of cash, $150.
One award of cash, $100.

Eight Districts.
There are eight districts and eight complete sets of awards as listed above. The object of dividing the territory into districts is to assure members that all of the awards cannot be won in one certain locality, but that a fine set of awards must go in their vicinity. Every person entered in this campaign has an opportunity of winning one of four automobiles, one of three cash awards, or the automobile which must go in their district. The dividing of the territory does not mean that a member is restricted as to where they may secure subscriptions and votes, as a member can get votes in their own district or any other district.

How to Get Votes and Win.
There are only two ways of getting votes which are necessary to win these awards. One way is by clipping the 10-cent free coupon from each issue of The Constitution. The other, and more rapid way, is by securing subscription payments from old and new subscribers to The Constitution, or both. Votes are allowed on all such payments. The number of votes and the subscription price is shown in the vote schedule in the advertisement in this issue.
All who work in this campaign will be rewarded for their efforts, as a cash commission of 10 per cent will be paid to all non-prize winners on the amount of money they turn in, provided they turn in $50 or more during the ten-week campaign.
The office of the club manager is located in The Constitution building on the third floor. It is open from 9 a. m. to 8 p. m. daily. The club manager will be glad to talk with you over the telephone, or in his office, or if you cannot come to the office will send some one to explain the campaign to you.

FATHER ADMITS KILLING WOMAN

the aged man declared after his son on cross examination had declared his father fired the fatal shot. "I took the pistol and it was discharged but the bullet went wild. They scuffled with me for possession of it and it was fired a second time. The bullet mortally wounded Mrs. Ferguson."
The defense abruptly closed its case with the testimony of the elder Hudson and argument was begun. The state holding to the theory that the younger man killed the woman and the attorneys for the defense pleading for his acquittal on the evidence of the father and son.
Argument will be concluded tomorrow.

No charge has been placed against the elder Hudson.
Mrs. Ferguson was shot and instantly killed in a secluded section of woodland along Wolf river on the outskirts of Memphis last February. Hudson, who disappeared after he is reported to have leaped from the Hannan bridge into the Mississippi river, was charged with the crime and later was captured near Chattanooga.

COAL MEN BELIEVE AGREEMENT IS NEAR the shroud of secrecy which has enveloped the negotiations.

Two reasons were advanced by representatives of both sides for a possible delay in signing the contract, after an understanding was reached as to its ultimate provision. They were:
1. Both the United Mine Workers of America and the operators concerned in the negotiations are timid about signing without assurances from the administration that they will not be held in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, both factions being under indictments in Indiana for alleged violation of the law in their last contract. The contemplated contract might even be sent to Washington for approval before it was signed, it was reported.
2. Signature would cause an immediate weakening of the "spot" coal market, eliminating any prospect for certain "spot" coal operators to profit in a market stimulated by an impending strike.

The real conflict in the negotiations is said to lie between two classes of operators; those whose output is contracted for, and to whom fluctuating markets mean little; and those who produce for the "spot" market.

Buy Coal in Wales.
In this connection the labor element today made public information from England that "interests representing large American soft coal producers" had since January 1 caused a "rush on the British coal exchange with an unusual number of orders" based on the anticipation of "labor troubles in the American coal industry," which created demands for coal for American export exceeding those during the strike last year.

According to this source, 300,000 tons of coal has been contracted for in Wales up to January 4, and 15 ships chartered to transport it to the United States, with three cargoes already en route.

Operators attending the conference declared they knew nothing of such operations, expressing a belief that if bona fide, they were conducted by "water-front speculators," not mine owners, who "stand to lose a pretty penny," because "there isn't going to be any strike."

The joint committee will resume sessions tomorrow, reporting, when its work is completed, to the general conference.

FEW LAWS WANTED BY REPUBLICANS

filled milk bill, both of which affect the farmer indirectly. The farm bloc hopes to get these through in short order and probably will.

Will Not Attempt These.
The following tasks will probably remain unattempted:

1. The Norris constitutional amendment moving the date of presidential inauguration forward to the third Monday in January. Senator Wadsworth, of New York, has introduced a bill providing that any constitutional amendment shall not be ratified during the term of the state legislatures within which it was first proposed. In other words, it must be made an issue on which the legislature shall run for election. This bill is aimed largely at prohibition, but it also may help the progressives, provided the political pendulum does not swing back to the conservatives.

2. The congressional investigations inaugurated by Senator La Follette looking toward government regulation of the petroleum industry, which probably will go over; and the second, a congressional investigation of hospitalization for world war veterans, may begin soon in connection with the veterans' bureau appropriation in the independent offices bill, but even this is highly speculative.
3. Labor legislation would comprise amending the Esch-Cummings transportation act. The farm bloc wants to dig into this act as soon as it is feasible, but there is little chance of it before next December. President Harding has pointed to the necessity of changing the act, and that would give the administration force a precedent for action themselves.
4. Ship subsidy—this is probably in the discard for a long time to come, and may be forever. A vote at this session of congress is now held practically impossible.

The patient seems averse to any extra session talk, so any visitor to the capital after March 4 will be shown the house and senate chambers, but the quidnunc will apologize, "They ain't workin' at it now."

and, so far as possible, in the environs of Atlanta, was the text of the resolution introduced by Miss Blanche Lovelidge before the club. The resolution was unanimously passed.

Would Curb Drug Sale.

Another resolution of interest was passed concerning narcotic traffic. The resolution follows:
Whereas, the narcotic drug traffic in America has almost tripled in volume in the past two years; and
Whereas, government statistics show that the United States uses 40 times more narcotic drugs per capita than any other white nation and 17 times more than the Chinese, who have always been considered the drug-drenched nation of the world; and
Whereas, the drug ring, conducted along strictly business lines, shows a steady determination and success in developing a market in every walk of life, among both young and old; and
Whereas, legal penalties for smugglers and traffickers in narcotic drugs are light and seldom enforced; and
Whereas, it is agreed by those who have made a deep study of this menace that the only way to check it is to cut off the source—poppy fields of India and the coca plantations of South America;

Be it resolved, That the president of the United States be requested by this organization to call an international conference leading toward suppression of the rapidly growing menace;
That copies of this resolution be sent to the president of the United States, the governor of this state, and congressmen and senators from Georgia.
This paper was introduced by Mrs. J. A. Mangot, Mrs. B. M. Boykin and Mrs. Charles Godfrey, and unanimously met the approval of the members of the club.

ACTRESS TELLS SECRET

Tells How to Darken Gray Hair With a Home-Made Mixture.

Joice Williams, the well-known American actress, recently made the following statement about gray hair and how to darken it, with a home-made mixture:

"Anyone can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray, streaked or faded hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Eucaly Compound, and 1-4 ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at very little cost. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger. It does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off."—(adv.)

Hit Fireworks Use.

It was also resolved that "owing to the serious danger of lock-jaw and other forms of disaster to the youth in our city which result from the sale and purchase of all forms of fireworks at certain periods of the year, we, the members of the Woman's club, not only wish to discourage this practice, but also to request that such traffic be both suppressed and prohibited by city authorities."

Another action of interest taken by the Woman's club was concerning the smoke question in Atlanta. The resolution introduced by Mrs. Newton C. Wing and adopted by the club is as follows:

Whereas, a smoke-laden atmosphere is injurious to health and vegetation and property; and
Whereas, through years of experimentation it has been determined that soft coal can be burned smokelessly;
Therefore, be it resolved, That the members of the Atlanta Woman's club, and typical of the good housewives of the city, urge that the work of smoke abatement be continued with increased vigor and public support to the end that where-possible all public and private operators of coal-burning equipment shall be required to conform to the laws of the city regarding this subject.

LESSONS FROM THE PAST.

No incident in modern history has so attracted the popular thought of the world to the ancient history of any nation or people or dynasty as the recent discoveries in the tomb of one of the pharaohs.

They have not only demonstrated the marvelous ability of the Egyptians of that age, not only physical and mental, but have proven beyond challenge a high and enlightened civilization that had been built upon ideals of commercial, industrial and educational progressiveness that might be emulated in these good days of the twentieth century, Anno Domini.

And as the newspapers of the world are telling daily the stories of the recent remarkable "finds"

in the old tomb of Tutankham, even the alabaster vases retaining the sweet odors of the ancient perfumes, one begins to think more concretely of Egyptian history of that "golden age," and to apply it—with any lessons it may present to the problems of today.

The greater problems of our generation are not new. Practically all of them appeared in other countries long ages ago.

The grave danger in the clamor

there is going up from some of the great building interests in this country now for unrestricted immigration—the letting down of the bars so that the north and east, certainly, may be flooded with foreign labor, without stifling, regardless of its effect upon society, upon law and order, and upon the unblemished integrity of American institutions—is most forcibly illustrated in the history of ancient Egypt.

their armies for 150 years had been undefeated, was the first of

THE MISTAKES OF THE KAISER

AN ANSWER TO THE KAISER'S MEMOIRS
By RENE VIVIANI
Premier of France When the War Broke Out
Copyright, 1923, for The Constitution.

AUTOCRACY—ANARCHY—DEMOCRACY

In accumulating upon the head of the Kaiser the tremendous and merited burden of crimes committed, one must see to it that history is not deflected from its true course; that, amid the huge mass of personal guilt for the war, collective and general guilt be not forgotten.

We are not saying this for the purpose of keeping alive hatred at a time when the concentration of the entire virile strength of the world is necessarily for its salvation—our task, indeed, is to carry out the mission of the future, clear the way. And if—as we believe—the world is to be regenerated, it is for us to determine the moral and material role which Germany, now lying prostrate, is to play some day in that regenerated universe.

Peace Treaty Accepted.
The treaty of peace was accepted by Germany, after nearly a year of debate, and she renewed this acceptance through the reichstag vote of March 10, 1921. The treaty is severe, she says, and yet it does not impose upon the vanquished the costs of the war, though France had then imposed upon her in 1871, and, owing to this, profound financial and economic difficulties still unsettle the allied nations, crushed under the arrears of their debts.

What of the French occupation of the Rhineland? Well, for three years forty-five of the French departments were occupied, nor did the German troops evacuate them until the war indemnity had been paid.

What of the indemnity exacted from Germany? Is it not too heavy. I am not going to immerse myself in calculations, now that time has elapsed and the value of money has diminished, but it seems that, comparing the war of 1870 with the great war in duration, scope, cruelty and cost in men and material things, the five billion francs of 1870 are, proportionately, an enormous sum compared with the sums of today.

Moreover, have the Germans thought about the damage caused? Let us set aside the dead, and speak only of things and of the living: Material Damage Germans Did. Ten French departments, representing, because of their industrial, mining, agricultural and commercial wealth, one-half or, at least, one-third of the wealth of France, have been destroyed and pillaged. Even the very tools have been smashed: the very horses and cattle, the very garments of the inhabitants, have been carried away in Germany.

When French soldiers, natives of this part of France—peasants, laborers, industrial workers, owners—returned to this region, what did they find? Nothing but a desert, nothing but death—anarchy even among the ruins!

Germany ought to pay. She has systematically looted her own bankruptcy. During this time France, who had borrowed money for her defense, has borrowed money to rebuild her ruins. During four years she has spent, for Germany's account, 95,000,000,000 francs, on rebuilding her ruins and paying the pensions of her widows and crippled soldiers.

And what of the German soldier? He returned home to find his home untouched, the factory still standing, the fields unimpaired. It is France who pays—though Germany is guilty and vanquished! It is impossible to look on at this spectacle with indifference.

STRIKERS DENY GUILT IN DEATH OF NEGRO

Five on Trial for Complicity in Trouble at Inman Yards.

The government's fight to convict five alleged strike injunction violators is expected to close Tuesday, when hearing in the case will be resumed.

All five defendants, Sam C. Shockley, Robert B. Bogart, Larry Ewing, Lewis Riddle and E. C. Wade, have testified, denying that they were in any way connected with the disorders at the Inman yards of the Southern railroad which resulted in the death of Etheridge Hopkins, a negro, on August 21 last, during the national walkout of shop crafts.

Efforts of the defense are directed toward establishing alibis for the defendants, and by impeaching witnesses for the government. The prosecution is attempting to break down the alibis. Judge Sibley's injunction, issued August 18, was against any way interfering with the employees of the railroad. The negro killed and those beaten were employees of the road at that time, and the crowd responsible is alleged to have been composed of striking shopmen.

Confederate Bill May Bring Cheer To Poor Family

Wouldbe Seller and Buyer of Outlawed Money Brought Together.

Charity oftentimes springs from unexpected sources.

All this trouble in the office of Attorney-General George M. Napier, over at the capitol, about Abner Lee Squire and his Confederate bond, looks now as though it will bring a silver lining to someone's dark cloud before the interest dies down. It's this way:

In Monday's mail, following many other applications to collect on outlawed Confederate securities, two letters were received. One was from Mrs. A. E. Norris, of 72 Church street, Southeast. She enclosed two $100 Confederate bills, and hoped that she could collect real money for them. She told how her husband is out of work and how their three little children are suffering for want of food and coal.

And she wound up her letter by saying if she could collect on these bills of the C. S. A., she would "feel like a millionaire."

Now comes in the second letter: E. Wesley Sheridan, of Bath, N. Y., wrote saying he would like to secure some Confederate money as a souvenir of the war between the states. He said he was ready to pay for it if necessary.

So—and here comes in the good—Mr. Sheridan was given Mrs. Norris' address. Mrs. Norris was given Mr. Sheridan's address. It is hoped that the money Mr. Sheridan is willing to exchange for Confederate bills will prove a help to Mrs. Norris in feeding and warming her three children.

WOMAN LEADER WILL BE HONORED WITH MONUMENT

Memorial in the form of a marble drinking fountain to be placed in the corridor of the state capitol will be erected in honor of Mrs. W. H. Feltom, of Cartersville, Georgia, woman's suffrage in the state of Georgia.

The fountain, which will be made of white marble, will, it is planned, be placed in the north corridor near the Ben Hill statue, and facing the steps used to reach the senate and house of representatives. It will be six feet in height, with sanitary drinking facilities for both children and adults.

Mrs. McLendon was a sister of Mrs. W. H. Feltom, of Cartersville, and was regarded as the outstanding figure in the two movements with which she was identified in the state. Leadership of woman's organizations had decided to erect this memorial and Mrs. Emma T. Martin and Mrs. Amelia Woodall secured permission for its erection in the capitol from Governor Hardwick Monday.

HOTEL MAGNATE SEES PROSPERITY IN TOURIST BOOM

Every sign points to an unprecedented prosperity in the south within the next five years, according to J. B. Pound, widely-known hotel magnate of Chattanooga, who with Mr. Pound was at the Ansley Hotel Monday morning en route to Miami, Fla., where they will spend the winter.

"Five hundred Pullman cars have been added to the Pullman company to handle the tourist trains in order to handle the vast increase in the number of tourists this season," he said, "and this is indicative of the increasing popularity of the extreme southern states as summer resorts."

"A great mistake has been made by not providing better highways for automobile tourists, and every state should vote a bond issue for building permanent highways to connect principal cities. Bad roads are doing as much to impede the progress of the south as any one problem that the south has to solve."

Mr. Pound says he is astonished at the growth of Atlanta since he built the Ansley hotel in this city ten years ago, and states that Atlanta has a wonderful future. Mr. Pound left Monday afternoon for Savannah and from that point will go to Miami.

Autumn Music Festival Is Planned To Open Greatest Outdoor Theater

Gutzon Borglum, world famous sculptor who is to carve a colossal memorial to confederate heroes on the face of the precipice above the stage, is also interested in the movement.

"The Stone Mountain amphitheater will never conflict with other established musical achievements of Atlanta," Miss Stephens told a Constitution reporter. "Grand opera in the way of a permanent institution and we would never want to do anything to impair its usefulness and success."

The Stone Mountain amphitheater will be capable of holding musical entertainments of such tremendous proportions that no other productions could approach them in magnificence. The field will be terraced to make it better suited to auditorium use. It is probable that driveways, wide enough for automobiles to "straddle" one way in single file, will be laid out on six of the terraces to enable people to hear the entertainments from their own conveyances.

Plans for adapting the natural outdoor auditorium to production of musical entertainments are not fully completed. Work of building a platform or stage large enough to support a chorus of almost any size will begin at an early date. It is planned to clear away a grove of trees at the foot of the mountain between the proposed stage and the big sloping field that will seat audiences as large as 100,000 people.

Property owners residing on West Peachtree street, between Porter place and West Tenth street, appeared before the city planning commission Monday and asked that an ordinance be approved to permit widening of West Peachtree between these intersections, so as to make it a 40-foot thoroughfare. Members of the commission voted unanimously to recommend it, the matter to be ultimately determined by council.

Work on the widening project was begun last year, but was held up, owing to lack of funds. Last Saturday the city planning commission appropriated $40,000 with which to complete the project, the commission was informed. The distance embraced in the widening project will be approximately 10,000 feet between Baker and West Tenth street.

Dr. Ridley was born in LaGrange, and had been actively engaged in practice of medicine in Atlanta for 35 years. He was a graduate of the Jefferson Medical college in Philadelphia, which school he attended after the close of the civil war. During the war he served with Rhode's division, Fourth Georgia regiment, army of General Jackson. He was a first lieutenant, and was wounded in the battle of Spotsylvania.

After moving to Atlanta, he was connected with St. Joseph's infirmary and Grady hospital. For many years he was president of the Piedmont Driving club. Dr. Ridley was first married to Miss Emma Leila Hill, daughter of the late United States Senator Benjamin Harvey Hill. Following the death of his first wife, he married Mrs. John F. Kiser, who was formerly Miss Cobbie Hood, of Cuthbert. He retired from the practice of medicine in 1904 and entered the mercantile business, in the firm of Everett Ridley, Kagan and company, and was a member until 1916.

Dr. Ridley is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Huncutt, Mrs. Allison Hagan, of Richmond, Va., and Mrs. R. B. Troutman, of Atlanta, and three sons, Dr. R. B. Ridley, Jr., John F. Ridley and Carl H. Ridley, all of Atlanta.

H. M. Patterson & Son are in charge of arrangements. Interment will be in West View.

CHANCE TAKING SECRET OF TYRUS COBB'S SUCCESS

Hit and Run Best Attack Of Famous Old Orioles; Value of Base Stealing

Various Methods of Stopping Double Steal
Are Discussed By John McGraw.
Lively Ball Has Halted Stealing.

BY JOHN J. MCGRAW.

Our Baltimore team of 1885 was even better than the one of 1894, the year of our first championship. It was practically the same team; that is, the individual players were the same, but the machine was being perfected by more accurate adjustment of the various cogs. Each player knew the function of the other and did his part to bring about perfect co-ordination.

Other clubs had good hitters, good fielders, good catchers and good pitchers. We were very clear to us that an advantage would lie in the way we got the most out of our strength. We sat up at night and talked these matters over. Every suggestion was given consideration, sometimes in the form of hot argument and sometimes in calm deliberation. We all had the same aim—to win—and we wanted it to be a victory of the team, not of the individual.

Obviously the secret of advantage was in base running—getting the larger number of runs out of a given number of hits. Right there is the mark of superiority of a ball club. That, I suppose, is true in any walk of life.

The Orioles had speed and could hit. By constant experiment we developed a system of base running that soon became famous. At the same time we had to develop a system of defense against base running by our opponents. I think I can truly say that we were pioneers in the present art of getting the most runs out of a small number of hits.

HIT AND RUN
The hit and run play was our best form of attack, though we often varied it. If, when the first man up got on base and the next batter was a good place hitter, we were almost certain to signal, or give the sign, as ball players call it, for the hit and run. The runner would start from first base with the pitch and if the batter hit behind him he would go to third. If a play was made to get him at third the batter would go to second. We always took chances. There is always an advantage in taking close chances. It puts the other fellow up against the worry about what to do. In other words, we would test his nerve instead of letting him test ours. That, incidentally, is one of the secrets of Ty Cobb's success. He always tests the other man's nerve.

Of course, opponents got to know this system. Then it was that we had to vary it. Often we used a play that was called "steal and slam." It was simply a variation of the hit and run. The batter would take the lead to actually steal the base. In that case, if the ball was a good one, the batter would slam at it. If the pitcher, expecting a hit and run, pitched out, the batter would simply let it go and take a chance on the runner stealing the base. In a majority of cases a fast runner would be safe. The batter then would be in a better position than ever. With a runner on second he could take his time and wait for a good one. He could even sacrifice so as to advance the runner to third and have a man on third with only one out.

I think we were among the first to develop a scheme for preventing the traditional double steal. When there are runners on first and third, in the early days, before my time even, it was almost certain that if the man on first started for second and a throw was made to him, the man on third would score. To this day that is a hard play to stop, but we managed to handle it rather successfully now.

VARIOUS SYSTEMS OF STOPPING PLAY.
Our first plan was to let the second baseman or shortstop cross in front of second, and take the throw and whip the ball to the plate in time to get the runner from third. That was the first plan. Other clubs also had this disadvantage. Soon the runner on third got to expect the play. As a result he would run back to third and both would be safe, but too late to get the man going to second.

The only way to beat that play successfully is to have a nervous second baseman or shortstop who can take the throw and then whip the ball back to the plate in time to catch the runner from third. If the man on third does not start then he can tag the runner from first. To attempt this play, though, would be stupid unless the catcher and second baseman were both accurate throwers and able to get the ball away quickly. Amateurs could hardly do that.

In the last World's series both the Giants and Yanks made the play by taking a chance on the long throw. In a college game, where the players are not so expert, the short throw seems to work better.

Another play, used merely as a surprise, is for the pitcher to intercept the throw and whip it right back to the catcher.

Still another system that we worked successfully, and it took Wilbert Robinson to do it, was for the catcher to make a bluff as if to throw to second. Instead he turns and whips the ball to third, catching the runner off the bag. That play can not be worked too often, but it is a good one to have in the arsenal. The other side will get wise and sign the man on third to stick to his bag. If he did so both runners would be safe. It is up to the pitcher and the catcher to decide which play to make and act simultaneously with his thought.

It was not so much the originality of these various plays that counted with the Orioles. It was the perfection with which they were carried out. We studied those things out at night and practiced them repeatedly in the morning.

IT IS EASIER TO STEAL THIRD.
Though it never seemed to strike ball players that way, it is really easier to make a steal of third than of second. That is one of my long suits. It was rare that I was ever thrown out stealing third. In fact, no ball player ought to be thrown out. His job is to get to third base. If he is judged to be out, the distance must be naturally accurate. In other words, he should never start for third until he has sufficient lead. He is able to get that lead by being behind the pitcher, and the lead then there is no excuse for his being thrown out. If he does miss it is because his judgment is bad.

Frank Merkle, who was called a very fast man on a sprint but he was an adept at stealing third base. He never started unless he had the right lead. Once started he ran like a deer. And to steal third is of enormous advantage.

There is no doubt but that the art of base running has fallen into decline due to the lively ball. That is one of the questions asked by those who have sent in filled out questionnaires. The answer is obvious.

Base running is really a matter of taking chances so that you are not succeeding hit. In the old days the single was to be expected. We didn't look for doubles, triples and home runs as we do now.

Singles are also more frequent now because with the lively ball any kind of a grounder is likely to shoot past an infielder for a clean hit. Fans, I believe, don't realize how much harder the infielder's job has become since the advent of the lively ball.

Now, instead of taking chances on base running stunts, I find that often there is more percentage in letting the runner hold his base and wait for the next man to hit one through. That accounts for the falling off in base stealing. The runner sees nothing to be gained by taking desperate chances

ASHER WILL ARRIVE SOON

Babe Asher, champion bantamweight of the American Expeditionary forces, who was signed Saturday to meet Tim O'Dowd, the Atlanta youth, for ten rounds here next Monday night, will inaugurate a southern campaign with this bout.

Don Curley, manager of the young soldier title-holder, reveals this information in a letter received by Walk Miller Monday, from Hot Springs, Ark.

"I wish to enter a challenge through the Atlanta newspapers to every bantamweight of prominence in the entire southland," wrote Curley. "Asher has been training faithfully for more than a month and we now feel that he is in the pink of physical condition, and formidable enough to face any boy of 118 pounds or under in the world."

Asher is a St. Louisan, getting his early experience there just before enlisting in the army. It was while sporting the khaki of Uncle Sam that Asher's ability really showed itself. He has a record made while in the army that is astounding for a youngster of his years and supposedly slim knowledge of the game at that time.

The A. E. F. kingpin, according to Manager Curley, is keen to have it out with O'Dowd.

Tim's Popularity.
"Tim has a great reputation out there," said Curley in his letter. "He has a great following in Texas and in this general vicinity, and they are eager to see more of him."

All of which is pleasing news to James A. Mayson, manager of the Atlanta youth, who has great faith in Asher's ability for the future. He is whipping Asher—a gigantic task, to say the least.

Promoter Miller announces that he has wired Asher and his manager to reach Atlanta by the middle of this week, so that Babe can be seen in person by the fans in the gymnasium before the bout.

O'Dowd is already here and in his customary excellent shape, though he plans to spend an hour or so at hard work every day prior to the contest. Freddie Bourke is the likely choice to meet Holy Flahive for ten rounds in the semi-windup to Monday night's show.

It is promised by Miller.

FULTON TEAMS SWAP COACHES

The Fulton high school athletic authorities exchanged basketball coaches Monday afternoon. Coach Henderson, who has been directing the destinies of the boys in the prep league, will no longer handle them, but will take over the reins of the ladies' side team. Coach Wimberly has been teaching the Fulton High girls along with the assistance of D. B. Eskew, who will continue in that capacity. Wimberly will coach the boys' teams from now on.

It also became known that Professor W. H. Evans, who has been connected with University School for Boys, has transferred his interest in the Fourteenth Street institution to other parties and he is now at Fulton High.

The Fulton High boys' team has not had the best record thus far in the prep league and the team seemed to be lacking in some respects. It has played some good games but other times the team seemed a bit dead on the floor.

Coaches Welcome Change.
The change was welcomed by both coaches and it just means that the coaching personnel of the two teams will exchange places, and both will work together as before in athletics at the county institution.

Coaches Henderson and Wimberly have for some time handled the Fulton High boys' and girls' teams almost simultaneously but only recently Henderson has been representing Fulton in the city prep league.

Despite the fact that some of the best games of the prep basketball season have already been played there is no reason why the games on Friday and Saturday are not fast and exciting as the games of last week.

Marist Plays Boys' High.
Boys' High and Marist should furnish some real basketball Friday afternoon. Marist is yet undefeated while Boys' High has lost two games and the Purple and White is ready to avenge itself. G. M. A. and University will also have a good battle. The recent addition of Bill Hern, the human skyscraper, to the cadet five may prove disastrous to some of the prep teams ere long.

Saturday afternoon Tech High and G. M. A. and Commercial and Deatur will furnish an afternoon full of fast basketball. The Deatur-Commercial game should be one of the most interesting of the season thus far. Commercial was forced to play an extra five minutes while Deatur has yet to meet any of the teams in the second division of the league.

Excitement Watching Macon Basketball Game Causes Death
Macon, Ga., January 22.—(Special.)—While watching his brother, Charles Sherlock Holmes, playing thrilling basketball at the city auditorium tonight, W. T. Holmes, Jr., suffered a hemorrhage of the lungs and died a few minutes later at the Macon hospital.

Excitement in watching the game was believed by physicians to have aggravated the hemorrhage.

Young Holmes returned about a month ago from Colorado where he had been for lung trouble. He lived at 800 Orange street with his mother, two sisters and two brothers. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

When a long hit is likely to come any time and drive him around.

I am sorry to see the fine art of base running go into the discard, but it would be foolish to take chances that do not gain anything. In fact, the chances of the batter hitting one through are greater than those of the runner stealing the base.

There are other serious drawbacks to the lively ball.

Tech, May 17-18-19 at Atlanta.
Games pending with Auburn and Georgia.

BY BILL MORROW.
By looking over the reader of this column will find exactly 24 scheduled games already arranged for the Oglethorpe baseball tilters of '23.

The schedule for the Petrels for the coming season is a good one and Coach Anderson is to be congratulated on the list arranged for his wards. The Petrels held a high place in the baseball line under the direction of Mr. Anderson and with this veteran back to direct the activities of the boys from Peachtree road, there is every indication that Oglethorpe is again to be heard from on the diamond.

As matters now stand, the first nine to face the Petrels will be the representatives of Yale. The Petrels' first jaunt will start on March 27 and Yale in her spring training quarters at Macon will present the first opposition. Following the brief stay in the Central city the Petrels will wander on to Columbus where the Camp Benning officers will play host at a brace of games on March 28 and 29. Camp Benning is an honored foe to the Petrels and the officers count it quite a feather in their caps if they can get the better of the college boys.

Following the two games in Columbus, the Petrels will return to their home territory and meet Penn. State here in a two game series.

Some time ago it was announced that the Petrels would spend a short time in Florida, getting in condition and tossing the ball around a bit. But faculty regulations call for exams at this time so the Petrels' baseball activities will be having their hands full caring for their personal troubles.

Games had already been scheduled with the University of Florida, Rollins college and the Atlanta Crackers in their training quarters, but the late announcement by the faculty will cause this trip to be called off. Coach Anderson is corresponding with the proper authorities of the above teams in an attempt to settle on other dates.

The trip through Kentucky and Virginia will be a nice one for the Oglethorpe crew. Six games are crowded in the space of six days and the Petrels will have to deliver a good brand of ball to hold their own around those parts. Following the completion of this trip, the Petrels will return to Atlanta and save for two excursions, to Macon and Tuscaloosa, they will be playing in their own back yard.

Game Gets Under Way at 8:15 O'Clock and Will Be Played at 90 Capitol Avenue.

Tonight at 8:15 Tech meets the fast Jewish Progressive club team on the new court which has been built by the B'nai B'rith society. It will be the first game between Tech and the J. P. C., and should be a thriller throughout. Tech is now in the best of condition and trim. After the recent game with Mercer, they feel willing to meet any team on any terms. As for the J. P. C. team, they have been practicing religiously and playing with unusual zeal, in order to get set for this game.

B'nai B'rith is a national benevolent organization devoted to the interests of the Jewish people throughout the length and breadth of the world. The organization does a great work in Atlanta, and has effected much good among the Jewish citizens here. They have built a new basketball court and gymnasium at 90 Capitol Avenue, and have turned it over to the Jewish Educational Alliance.

This gymnasium will be used for all Jewish sports. All Jewish organizations in the city wishing to take advantage of the athletic possibilities of the new gym will be given ample opportunity. At present, the J. P. C. team is the only one using the gym. Others will take advantage of the opportunity when they learn of the liberal offer of the Jewish Educational Alliance.

Jen, though he was shifted into the game Saturday in the last few minutes, will not be able to start the game. Nor will Brewster, who has been out of the game for some time. A heavy cold or light touch of flu, but the remainder of the line-up will remain intact.

Some facts which you would do well to remember: The game will begin promptly at 8:15; it is to be played at the new gym at 90 Capitol Avenue; the price of admission is $1 which admits you and your lady. After the game dancing will be in vogue. One of the best orchestras in the city has been procured.

The line-up:
Tech: Pos. J. P. C.
Denkovic.....J.....Speilburger
Matheson.....J.....Finkelshtein
Eckford.....C.....Dorfman
Roane.....G.....C. Rosenberg

Albany's Five Beats Wofford

Albany, Ga., January 22.—Albany defeated Wofford college, of Spartanburg, S. C., 25 to 23, in one of the roughest and poorest played games of the season here tonight. For some reason the Albany team could not get to going at its accustomed clip in this game, and the rough tactics of the visitors seemed to upset the usual calm and steady demeanor of the Moonmen.

JEMISON PRESIDENT SOUTH GA. GOLF LOOP
Thomasville, Ga., January 22.—The formation of the Georgia-Florida Golf League for the season of 1923 at Moultrie on Friday, seems to have put fresh enthusiasm in Thomasville golfers and there will no doubt be ample material from which to form the Thomasville team, judging from the interest shown here.

Thomasville is well represented in the newly chosen officers of the league by J. B. Jemison, president, and J. W. Turner, secretary and treasurer.

The playing here of the annual tournament on February 22, George Washington's birthday, will no doubt draw a large number of devotees of golf from the nearby towns and there will also be a number of northern golfers here, both from among the winter residents and the visitors here in the neighboring towns in Florida.

The Thomasville team will be organized at an early date and present indications are that it will be one that will fully sustain the reputation of the town for its fine golf players.

SUGGS SOLD TO YANKEES

Who was it that said some time ago that not a single one of the players that toiled with the cellar-bound Crackers last season would get a crack at a big league pay check for the 1923 campaign?

As this newspaper remembers it, the fans in general were responsible for the assertion and considerable truth there was in it, too, until Jack Corbett, president of the Atlanta Baseball company, wired friends here yesterday that he had sold John (Lefty) Suggs to the New York Yankees. Jack is in the big city arranging some deals that he hopes will put the Crackers on top of the heap in the Southern league.

No price was mentioned and the chances are that Suggs is to figure in a trade of players that will be announced later. The Atlanta franchise is hardly in need of money, but Corbett is in the market for players and where an advantageous deal can be sent over, trust him to pull it.

Suggs came directly to Atlanta from Auburn, where he was regarded as one of the best southpaws ever produced at that college. The late Charlie Frank was responsible for Atlanta securing this young man. The Dutchman saw Johnny twirl college baseball and later, when Suggs was one of the pitching aces on the Camp Wheeler service team, Frank was impressed by his work.

His first season with Atlanta, 1919, was this city's last "pennant" year, and Johnny contributed many victories to the collection. Again in 1920 he was in fine form and reaped a good record. He declined with the rest of the gang last summer and was soon sent to Memphis. With the Crackers, Johnny was very effective, winning close to seven games in a row.

Speedy Keith, forward, is doing his second stretch with Berkeley, left forward, beginning his third year on the team. Star forward of the Sidney Lanier H. I. of Montgomery, the captain came up, stepped right into a regular's shoes at Bama, and has been there ever since. Though short and light, the Crimson skipper is tough as rawhide, fast, shifty and a sure shot most of the way.

Vernon Stabler, one of the "Big Four," is playing his second year at right guard. Vernon was all-star center in '21 with Greenville H. I., and he served up the forward alongside Captain McGauley as promptly as he came out. He is tall, husky, dribbles, passes and mixes well, though a bit inclined to loaf unless peevish. He specializes in shots under the basket and is very efficient at it.

Slamming To Fight Krohn
Young Stribling is billed to battle Marullo, the hard-hitting New Orleans slugger, in a battle for the championship. Stribling has his mind on another engagement. He is thinking of next Tuesday night and his fight at the Auditorium, when he runs into Harry Krohn, the Akron Thunderbolt, who has fought and defeated some of the best men in the country.

Tuesday's battle—promoted incidentally by headquarters troop of the 10th cavalry, national guard—will mark Stribling's return to Atlanta ringdom after 10 months' absence. During this time the youngster walked straight through the southern welterweights, into the middleweight class and just recently scored an easy victory over George Shade.

In Krohn, Stribling meets a much tougher foe than Shade proved to be and the kid knows it. Krohn started fighting back in 1915. By 1918 he was matching gloves with the best in the business and got away with the dangerous business. He improved steadily until in 1921 he stopped Mike McTigue in 11 rounds in New York. Fans are still talking about that fight.

The victory cost Krohn a crack at the championship, as Wilson's crafty managers figured that Harry was good enough to stop Mike McTigue, he was too tough a proposition for Wilson and the match between the two—that had practically been clinched by New York promoters—was called off.

Krohn will probably reach Atlanta in time for a workout Sunday, but he is certain to be in the city by Monday and the fans will be invited to see him sail through a practice spin. Stribling wired yesterday that he would make every effort to spend at least one day in the city before the fight in order to permit the customers to look him over.

Carter and Other Stars Are Expected to Extend Local Five Friday Night

Team Has Not Yet Hit Stride That Brought Success Last Year, But Bernie Believes It Will Reach Form.

BY DUKE MERRITT.

University, Ala., January 22.—(Special.)—Alabama will display to Atlanta fans a veteran, husky basketball team when they meet the Atlanta Athletic club in Atlanta Friday night, and one that has a plenty, even a surplus, of reserve strength.

Of the first eight men of the team, six are letter men, and of the eight, four extend to and beyond the 6-foot mark in altitude. Propst and McClintock, guards; Carter, center, and Stabler, forward, compose the elevated four, and though the others are not so long, nor so heavy, they are not fragile unto breaking nor slight unto being blown about by opponents.

Captain Emmett McGauley, left forward, is beginning his third year on the team. Star forward of the Sidney Lanier H. I. of Montgomery, the captain came up, stepped right into a regular's shoes at Bama, and has been there ever since. Though short and light, the Crimson skipper is tough as rawhide, fast, shifty and a sure shot most of the way.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week

Fire Mountain

BY NORMAN SPRINGER

Next Week, "Too Many Crooks"
By E. J. Rath

"Exactly. Your intuition is remarkable," stated the hunchback. "But—please—do not look so shocked. Observe: Ichi, the beast, picks Little Billy's pocket, and the way to Fire Mountain is lost; Little Billy picks Mr. Blake's pocket, and the way to Fire Mountain is regained! Is it not beautifully simple?"
"I won't take me long to tell my part of the story," commenced Captain Dabney. "It happened last summer, up in Bering Sea. I dodged out of the fog-bank, where I had been playing hide-and-seek with a Russian gunboat, and saw the sun for the first time in a week, and at the same time clapped upon Fire Mountain. Ay, I had my eyes then—good eyes, too."
"Fire Mountain," said a voice.
"It is a island sticking up out of the water several hundred miles off the Kamchatka coast. But I guess I had better tell you how we came to be in Bering last summer."
"You know, lad, I am a trader. Fur is a mighty profitable trade, if you can get enough fur, and at reasonable prices, and for the last ten years I have traded every summer with the natives for their furs."
"The Russian Chartered company has a monopoly of the fur trade in eastern Siberia, and insists upon five thousand per cent profit in dealings with the natives. Naturally, the natives are more than anxious to trade with a free lance. The Russian government keeps a little tin-pot gunboat cruising up and down to prevent poaching, and if you are caught it means the mines for all hands."
"But Lord!" Any live Yankee can dodge those lubbers. The last chase they gave me was last August. We made for a fog-bank. Three days he rammed around, looking for us, and then he gave up for a bad job. The second morning after, as wicked a looking saw-tooth reef as I ever want to see."
"The reef encircled a mountain that stuck straight up out of the sea for about two thousand feet. It was an old volcano, still smoking. We discovered a break in the reef, a little bay bitten narrowly into the mountain, and a beach."
"The mountain stuck up sheer in front of us and on either side of the bay. It was full of caves, and the mountain sides were overlaid for an unknown depth with black lava twisted into all manner of shapes."
"On the level with the beach were several cave openings. One was a putting rock that looked like an elephant's head, and beneath the black lava, and beneath the outflowing trunk, was a black opening leading into the mountain. There was the sound of running water from within, and the wind howled like a sabath of witches. We didn't investigate—no torches."
"Then way up on the beach, and behind some big boulders, we discovered the ribs of a whaleboat, rust-eaten sheath-knife, and a board that contained part of a ship's name. The lettering was almost effaced; we made out the letters L-I-V—and beneath it the word, BEDFORD."
"Now, Billy, you commence—it is your turn to talk."
"My turn to talk?" exclaimed the lively hunchback. "Telling is my favorite sport. But before I commence, I will show friend Blake, here Exhibit B."
He reached into the cashbox and drew out a little pocket notebook, a cheap, dog-eared thing with cracked cardboard covers. Little Billy held it up before Martin's eyes.
"Martin leaned close and saw written in faded ink on the fly-leaf the inscription:
John Winters.
Bark "Good Luck" of New Bedford, 1889."
No. 2
Little Billy explained he had discovered the log while recovering from a "periodical spree" in a Chinese resort in Honolulu. The first entry, which he read to Martin, told of the capture of some whales by the crew of the "Good Luck" and in the last paragraph read:
"Costa picked up a lump of ambergris near his kill. The ambergris weighs 25 pounds. A fine day's work."
"Tell me, Blake, do you know anything about ambergris?" asked Billy.
"No, never heard of the stuff," answered Martin.
"Then we will have to digress a moment," said Little Billy. "Because, from tonight, you will think of ambergris by day, and dream of it by night—ambergris in kegs, barrels, and in boxes, my friend, is the stuff John Winters calls 'ambergris.' It is a waxy substance, very light weight, and which friend while belches forth when he gets the colic from feasting too heavily upon squid. Squid, otherwise cuttle-fish, is a horrid monster, all arms and beak, which the cachalot considers a most delectable tidbit. "Ambergris is the best perfume base obtainable—it has the virtue of making the odor superfine and enduring. The demand for it is insistent, and unsatisfied. Today there is an almost unlimited market for ambergris. We looked up prices in 'Frisco and found that $40 an ounce will be paid without haggleing."
"Meanwhile, let us to John Winters' Journal again. Here comes the smashing denouement, the very next day, April 1, 1810:
"This day there did happen to us the like which no whalerman aboard can remember. I will write it down like it happened."
"This morning, at dawn, we came through the channel into the lagoon of the north island. I was given the task of wooding, and Costa was told off to water. We towed the casks ashore, and landed on a fine, white beach, that was littered with drift-logs. While the men were rolling the casks up to the spring Costa and I took a walk along the beach. We came upon a great squid lying dead. He had been bitten in two by a cachalot, and had only three arms left, but they were of tremendous length. Then we saw pieces of other squid all along the beach."
"Suddenly Costa ran forward and gave a great shout, and bent over what I had taken to be a big jelly-fish. "By Gar—grease!" says he. It was a big lump of ambergris, the biggest any man aboard has ever seen. It weighs 108 pounds."
"But this was not all. Costa and I looked along the beach, and we found it was dotted with the precious stuff. "I sent Costa straightway aboard to tell the captain, and he brought everybody ashore, and we combed the beach all the way around the lagoon. By nightfall we had a big bonload, and we went aboard. The old man is dancing with joy. When I got home I will buy a farm and settle down ashore. I think Alice will take me, and if she don't, there are plenty of other girls in the world."
"You see, friend Winters is indulging in the time-honored pastime of spending his pay day before he has it, and of vowing the usual sailor vow to leave the sea and buy a farm."
"Now we will skip to the last regular entry in the log."
"Still in the fog. We have been three weeks without a sight, fogbound, and plundering God knows where. It is so thick we cannot see a ship's length in any direction."
"I know the Old Man is worried, because the Kamchatka coast is close at hand. I am thinking a lot about Alice."
"May God have mercy! I sit in the window of the dry cave, on the Fire Mountain, and write by the light of the midnight sun!"
"Manner! Silva and I are the sole survivors of the wreck of the 'Good Luck.' Thirty-five were lost. We are cast away on a barren island. It is a volcanic mountain, filled with black lava. There is a bottomless hole that belches steam, and the earth shakes." It happened a week ago. It was very thick and impossible to keep a good lookout. We jammed between two monster rocks, and the mast went by the board, and the ship broke in two, and all hands forward, except Silva, who was at the wheel, went too. Silva and I salvaged all the wreckage we could reach. We got a cask of beef and one of biscuit, and a "handy Billy." The quarter-board came ashore, only a little damaged. We pulled off to the wreck, and succeeded in boarding her. Then the devil entered into us, and we were possessed by greed. We had planned to make out the letters L-I-V—and beneath it the word, BEDFORD."
"Now, Billy, you commence—it is your turn to talk."
"My turn to talk?" exclaimed the lively hunchback. "Telling is my favorite sport. But before I commence, I will show friend Blake, here Exhibit B."

Bark "Good Luck" of New Bedford, 1889."
No. 2
Little Billy explained he had discovered the log while recovering from a "periodical spree" in a Chinese resort in Honolulu. The first entry, which he read to Martin, told of the capture of some whales by the crew of the "Good Luck" and in the last paragraph read:
"Costa picked up a lump of ambergris near his kill. The ambergris weighs 25 pounds. A fine day's work."
"Tell me, Blake, do you know anything about ambergris?" asked Billy.
"No, never heard of the stuff," answered Martin.
"Then we will have to digress a moment," said Little Billy. "Because, from tonight, you will think of ambergris by day, and dream of it by night—ambergris in kegs, barrels, and in boxes, my friend, is the stuff John Winters calls 'ambergris.' It is a waxy substance, very light weight, and which friend while belches forth when he gets the colic from feasting too heavily upon squid. Squid, otherwise cuttle-fish, is a horrid monster, all arms and beak, which the cachalot considers a most delectable tidbit. "Ambergris is the best perfume base obtainable—it has the virtue of making the odor superfine and enduring. The demand for it is insistent, and unsatisfied. Today there is an almost unlimited market for ambergris. We looked up prices in 'Frisco and found that $40 an ounce will be paid without haggleing."

ter's Journal again. Here comes the smashing denouement, the very next day, April 1, 1810:
"This day there did happen to us the like which no whalerman aboard can remember. I will write it down like it happened."
"This morning, at dawn, we came through the channel into the lagoon of the north island. I was given the task of wooding, and Costa was told off to water. We towed the casks ashore, and landed on a fine, white beach, that was littered with drift-logs. While the men were rolling the casks up to the spring Costa and I took a walk along the beach. We came upon a great squid lying dead. He had been bitten in two by a cachalot, and had only three arms left, but they were of tremendous length. Then we saw pieces of other squid all along the beach."
"Suddenly Costa ran forward and gave a great shout, and bent over what I had taken to be a big jelly-fish. "By Gar—grease!" says he. It was a big lump of ambergris, the biggest any man aboard has ever seen. It weighs 108 pounds."
"But this was not all. Costa and I looked along the beach, and we found it was dotted with the precious stuff. "I sent Costa straightway aboard to tell the captain, and he brought everybody ashore, and we combed the beach all the way around the lagoon. By nightfall we had a big bonload, and we went aboard. The old man is dancing with joy. When I got home I will buy a farm and settle down ashore. I think Alice will take me, and if she don't, there are plenty of other girls in the world."
"You see, friend Winters is indulging in the time-honored pastime of spending his pay day before he has it, and of vowing the usual sailor vow to leave the sea and buy a farm."
"Now we will skip to the last regular entry in the log."
"Still in the fog. We have been three weeks without a sight, fogbound, and plundering God knows where. It is so thick we cannot see a ship's length in any direction."
"I know the Old Man is worried, because the Kamchatka coast is close at hand. I am thinking a lot about Alice."
"May God have mercy! I sit in the window of the dry cave, on the Fire Mountain, and write by the light of the midnight sun!"
"Manner! Silva and I are the sole survivors of the wreck of the 'Good Luck.' Thirty-five were lost. We are cast away on a barren island. It is a volcanic mountain, filled with black lava. There is a bottomless hole that belches steam, and the earth shakes." It happened a week ago. It was very thick and impossible to keep a good lookout. We jammed between two monster rocks, and the mast went by the board, and the ship broke in two, and all hands forward, except Silva, who was at the wheel, went too. Silva and I salvaged all the wreckage we could reach. We got a cask of beef and one of biscuit, and a "handy Billy." The quarter-board came ashore, only a little damaged. We pulled off to the wreck, and succeeded in boarding her. Then the devil entered into us, and we were possessed by greed. We had planned to make out the letters L-I-V—and beneath it the word, BEDFORD."
"Now, Billy, you commence—it is your turn to talk."
"My turn to talk?" exclaimed the lively hunchback. "Telling is my favorite sport. But before I commence, I will show friend Blake, here Exhibit B."
He reached into the cashbox and drew out a little pocket notebook, a cheap, dog-eared thing with cracked cardboard covers. Little Billy held it up before Martin's eyes.
"Martin leaned close and saw written in faded ink on the fly-leaf the inscription:
John Winters.

he is very superstitious, but I saw it was steam. But it is an evil place. And afterward we found the hole in the roof that led to this dry cave. This window I write by is the only daylight opening in the dry cave, and it is full 40 feet above the beach."
"But we had no nerve to look deeper into the black guts of this awful place, and we decided to use this case. So, I rigged the handy Billy, and we hoisted all the grease in through the window, and stowed it."
"There—that was written a week after the wreck," said Little Billy. "The next one, three days later, says: 'We have been here ten days, now, and I think things look mighty black. Silva's nerve is gone, and I have to fight to keep mine. The mountain shakes continuously, and we fear it will erupt. And always there is the noise, the moaning in the hole, and the great rumble. I have got Silva. Silva has gone down to the beach to get shellfish. We are saving the beef, as much as we can. I am glad Silva is out of my sight. He is mad, and God help me! I fear I am going mad, too. He sits and looks at me by the hour, just looks, looks, and says not a word, and his eyes burn.'"
"I am feared of him. He is a murderer. He told me so, when his conscience mastered him. He told me why he feared the hole. He drank of the hot spring, and when he got a bellyache, he thought he was dying. Then he told me that he was one of the hands on the Argonaut, a dozen years ago, and that there was mutiny, and that he strangled the captain with his hands. And he says the moaning down in the hole is the captain calling him. Now, he goes down to the edge of the hole and howls at the captain."
"Now—the next entry. Day or two later, I judge," said Billy. "He is gone! He was sitting opposite me, and suddenly he sings out something in his own lingo, and sprang to his feet, and rushed down toward the hole leading to the windy cave. He was laughing awfully. I followed—but could not catch him. He jumped into the hole and the noise stopped. And I stayed through the shake, and saw the lights from the pit."
"God help me, I wanted to jump, too!"
"I am going to leave this place tomorrow. I have repaired the quarter-board, and hopeless or not, I will try to find Kamchatka. It is better than to stay here, and go mad, and follow Silva!"
"I have written the secret of the cave on a piece of the lining of my parka, though God knows if I shall ever need it."
"The next entry is just a scrawl," said Little Billy. "It is barely legible."
"I am in the fog—the terrible gray fog! No water! I see Alice in the fog! "And then—the end!"
"I see Silva sitting opposite me. He looks, looks! Lord God, hast thou deserted me?"
"Billy, who had been with Captain Dabney when the Cohasset reached the volcanic island, realized the identity of the place with Winters' island. From the Chinese owner of the resort the hunchback learned that Winters had been picked up demented in the open boat, brought to Honolulu and had there died. He left his log with the Chinaman, who sold it to Little Billy for "five dollars."

At breakfast next morning I acquainted Ruth with the passages I read to you," Little Billy explained. "We were waited on by Ichi, the little Jap, whom we shipped as cook at Hakodate. As he apparently knew hardly anything of English, we took no pains to guard our speech against him. Indeed, we never gave him a thought. We verified the "Good Luck's" loss and congratulated ourselves on the finding of Fire Mountain—all within the hearing of Ichi. "We were daunted only by the prospect of searching blindly through that cave-ridden mountain. Then Ruth found the code. A rip on the lining of the log book revealed it—the piece of skin you see on the table. The writing, you see, is all numerals. Martin inspected the faded jumble of figures. 433445442361533146121511132662433615311535231133446231511

"Three excellent reasons," answered the hunchback. "First, Winters mentions writing down the secret of the cave's location and we find the skin; second, Smatt himself deciphered the figures for Ichi; third, Ruth and I proved correctness of the deciphering this morning. We talked to each other through the wall in the "Black Cruiser" by means of it. Consultation with Poe's "Goldbug" gave me the key. It is what is called a checkerboard code. I will draw it out."

Biennial of Women's Clubs Will Be Brilliant Event

At the brilliant bi-monthly meeting of the Atlanta Woman's club, held Monday in the auditorium of the Woman's Club building, plans for the forthcoming council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held here Jan. 7, 8 and 9, were announced by Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, chairman of the central committee in Atlanta. The following were appointed to serve with Mrs. Richardson on the committee: Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Woman's club, ex-officio; Mrs. Samuel Inman, director for Georgia; Mrs. Norman Sharp, vice president of the Atlanta Woman's club and secretary of the committee; Mrs. R. K. Hambo, co-chairman with Mrs. Richardson; Mrs. Howard McCall, auditor of the Atlanta Woman's club, chairman of credentials; Mrs. McCord Roberts, local chairman of publicity and convention publicity chairman; Mrs. Norman Pool, treasurer of the Atlanta Woman's club, treasurer; Mrs. J. E. Hays, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, advisory; Mrs. Omar Elder, recording secretary of the Atlanta Woman's club, advisory; and Mrs. Bun Wylie, corresponding secretary of the Woman's club, advisory.

The convention headquarters will be at the Ansley hotel. The meetings will be held in the Baptist tabernacle and will open with a meeting of the executive board of the general federation, May 7.

Mrs. Richardson announced that this is the first time in the history of the National Federation of Women's Clubs that a single club has ever acted as hostess, as the Atlanta Woman's club will, when the council convenes. In every other city, several club bodies have combined, but in Atlanta it is the Woman's club alone. The city council has voted $3,000 towards the entertainment fund.

Chief Justice Taft Invited.

Many distinguished visitors are coming and all of the speeches will be made by the federation visitors, among whom will be Mrs. Thomas Winter, national president; Mrs. Percy Pennington, past president; Mrs. Edward Franklin White, who has recently framed the divorce law introduced into congress, and legislative chairman of the national federation; Mrs. George Minto Baker, of Boston, and Mrs. James Hayes, president of the Georgia state federation. Chief Justice William Howard Taft will be announced later.

Miss Schenck Weds Dr. Charles Warren.

San Francisco, Cal., January 22.—A marriage of interest throughout the state of Georgia was that of Miss Lois Belle Schenck, of Hollywood, Cal., and Charles Mayro Warren, of Glendora, Cal., in San Francisco on Saturday, January 20. The announcement is of wide local interest because of the fact that the bride was formerly an Atlanta girl, having lived here up until two years ago, when she moved to her present address in California. She was a popular member of the younger set and has a host of friends in Atlanta and Georgia.

Mr. Warren is a Cornell graduate and a prominent member of the fruit growing industry of southern California, operating one of the largest orange groves in that section of the state.

Mrs. Warren was a recent visitor in Atlanta, having spent the Christmas holidays with Mrs. John M. Oiler, Jr., in the Goforth apartments on Moreland avenue, where she was the honor guest at a number of parties and receptions.

Upon her return to California she was met in San Francisco by the groom and the wedding ceremonies were performed in the presence of a few friends and relatives. The bride couple motored to Los Angeles, via Santa Barbara and other well known Pacific coast resorts.

They will make their home in Glendora, Cal., the home of the groom.

Miss Stringfellow To Be Honored.

Miss Anne Stringfellow, lovely debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Stringfellow, will be honor guest at the bridge-ten given this afternoon at the Druid Hills Golf club at which Mrs. Lollie Workham Pickett will be hostess.

Invited to meet the honor guest are Misses Alice Eames, Martha Boynton, Sarah Orme, Marjorie Hook, Margaret McIntyre, Margaret Morgan, Mary Shelden, Lydia Matthews, Douglas Paine, Emily Davis, Margaret Block, and the bride, the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Stringfellow, Emily Nixon, Marianne Goldsmith, Mrs. George Bell, Mrs. Floy Holt, Mrs. Reginald Pope, Mrs. Charles Orme and Mrs. Waldo Mallory.

Makes a Family Supply of Cough Remedy

Really better than ready-made cough syrups, and saves money. Easily and quickly prepared.

If you combined the curative properties of every known "ready-made" cough remedy, you probably could not get as much real curative power as there is in this simple home-made cough syrup, which is easily prepared in a few minutes.

Get from any druggist 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with syrup, using either plain granulated sugar syrup, strained molasses, honey, or corn syrup, as desired. The result is a pint of really better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Tastes pleasant and never spoils.

This Pinex and Syrup preparation gets right at the cause of a cough and gives almost immediate relief. It loosens the phlegm, stops the nasty throat tickle and heals the sore, irritated membranes so gently and easily that it is really astonishing.

A day's use will usually overcome the ordinary cough and for bronchitis, croup, hoarseness and bronchial asthma, there is nothing better.

Pinex is a most valuable concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations to break severe coughs. To avoid disappointment, ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., St. Wayne, Ind.

will probably be one of the speakers during the convention.

Husbands Coming, Too.

Mrs. Richardson announced that only the physical care of the delegates and their entertainment becomes the responsibility of the hostesses of the conventions of the national body, the program of business being in the hands of the federation's appointees. Mrs. George Minto Baker, of Boston, Mass., All of the husbands of the club delegates are invited, and many are coming. They will be entertained by the chamber of commerce.

Among hearts scheduled for the entertainment of the visitors will be a garden party at the woman's club, to which will be invited the governor, governor-elect, mayor, chief justice, heads of educational institutions and other notables.

To Give Barbecue.

A feature much anticipated by the delegates who are coming from forty-eight states will be the old-fashioned barbecue given one day during the meeting. The song, "We Will Feed You on Barbecue and Brunswick Stew in Atlanta," which Mrs. W. S. Melton in president, has invited the delegates for tea during the Emory visit.

Many Interesting Exhibits.

There will be a wonderful art exhibit in the Atlanta Woman's club gallery, arranged by Mrs. Berry, of the national federation. In addition to this, there will be exhibits of the Smith-Hughes classes and the Tallulah Falls school, arranged by the home economics departments of the city and state clubs. The executive board of the Georgia state federation will act as hostesses to Georgia women.

A happy thought has been that of asking all women club members in Atlanta to act as hostesses to women from their home states.

Other committees and plans will be announced later.

Miss Dillard To Speak.

Miss Irene Dillard, of the La Grange college faculty, will speak this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the meeting of the Atlanta chapter of the La Grange College Alumnae and Former Students' association.

Miss Dillard is an interesting and attractive speaker and is enthusiastic for the college. She has a definite message for the Atlanta alumnae and all students who have attended the college are urged to be present.

Luckie Street P-T-A Meeting.

The Parent-Teacher Association of Luckie Street School will hold its regular monthly meeting Wednesday, Jan. 24, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Striplin will speak on "Social Service and Citizenship."

Miss Martha Crow will present a musical program at which the regular business meeting will be held.

Getting On at the Office

BY HELEN ORMSBEE

A RULE THAT DIDN'T WORK BOTH WAYS.

"If I were you, Carrie, I'd go crazy," remarked Anita Bronson. Carrie Sunderland glanced up from the telephone book which she was consulting.

"Why?" she inquired mildly.

"Because you're always fussing to make sure things are just right," answered Anita. "There you are, checking that list of addresses. I call it a waste of time and energy. Miss Nelson gave you the list, so, of course, there wouldn't be any mistakes in it."

"But, you see, she didn't get it up herself," Claire explained. "Mr. Murchison mailed it to her. She dictated some letters for me to send to the people on the list, and I thought it'd save time in the end if I just verified."

Anita cut her off. "That's exactly it. You verify things and check things till I should think you'd go dippy. I don't believe in all that and I seem to come out all right."

"Yes, but—"

"Don't worry. That's my rule," continued Anita. "It's perfectly wonderful how well it works. Why, if I'm in a hole, somebody always comes along and pulls me out."

Viola Murphy broke into the conversation. "Yes. And that somebody's generally Carrie," she observed caustically. "Look here, Anita, wasn't it yesterday she found a letter you'd thrown into the scrap basket by mistake?"

Anita admitted that this was the case. But I'd rather slip up once in a while than be as fussy as Carrie," she added.

Carrie Sunderland weakened. "I suppose you're right," she conceded. "You girls are always laughing and calling me—Careful Carrie. Just for once I'll take your advice. I'm in a hurry and I'll save time."

Whereupon, she departed to type her letters. Before long she returned, bringing the carbon copies of them.

"Anita, would you mind checking over those addresses?" she begged.

"After all, I hate to send them out without looking them up. You're not busy just now, and Miss Nelson's waiting to give me more dictation."

When Carrie was out of sight, Anita glanced over the letters casually.

"Those addresses seem all right to me," she told herself. "No need to compare them with the phone book. It's such a bother. Carrie's too particular."

Hours later, Carrie came to her. "Isn't it too bad, one of those letters went out with a wrong address? I just happened to see the right one in the phone book."

Anita said nothing.

"It's funny," Carrie went on sadly. "When I try not to worry, it doesn't work a bit. You told me, Anita, if anything went wrong with you, some one always pulled you out of the hole. But nobody pulled me out."

"Huh!" commented Viola Murphy. "It makes some difference who's doing the pulling!"

BEAUTY CHATS

By Edna K. Forbes

FROM MY MAIL BAG.

A Thankful Reader—Hollows under the eyes have many causes, poor health being the most general one. Build yourself up, get eight to nine hours sleep a night in a room filled with fresh air, take plenty of outdoor exercise, and have a doctor's examination for blood, liver or kidney trouble.

Crease—Do not use anything as a powder base. Vanishing creams clog the skin and the result is a gummy mixture when combined with powder. Discourage Nell—Surely it would not be harmful to fill out the hollow in the neck below the chin. Try massaging the neck with warm cocoa butter.

S. G. S.—Your method of curling the eyelashes is excellent and I shall quote from your letter for the benefit of other readers. As a suggestion, you might produce a more natural effect if you try to curl only the tips of the lashes.

S. G. C.'s method is as follows: She rubs the lashes first with olive oil, then she takes the blunt edge of a small knife blade or a nail file, holds over the lashes and presses with her finger under the lashes so as to press them gently against the knife for about one minute. When she opens her eyes the lashes are turned up. This method unfortunately gives only temporary effects.

Anxious Ellen—I know that a great many concerns advertise the fact that their products remove hair permanently. And so they do, but they say nothing about the hair under the skin that grows in again immediately. The electric needle by killing the roots of these hairs is a permanent cure when properly used. I do not know anything about the merits of the home electric apparatus.

Mary C. A.—A good facial surgeon can remove the paraffin that you have so unwisely had injected under your skin. This injection is so delicate and dangerous an operation that I have known only a few cases where it was successful and then merely to fill in those deep wrinkles between the eyes.

M. K. R.—One reason why your skin is so dry is that you've filled it with cream and coated it immediately with powder, the combination forming a gummy mixture that keeps the pores from acting properly. I would advise you to diet, to drink six glasses of water a day, two of them taken half an hour before breakfast, and to use cleansing cream on the skin before you wash, washing it out with soap and water.

Thank You—A good cure for black heads is a paste made of laundry starch and cold water rubbed into the skin and allowed to remain on for half an hour every day.

Tomorrow—How to Powder.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Forbes in care of the "Beauty Chats" department will be answered in these columns in their turn. This requires considerable time, however, owing to the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be inclosed with the question.—The Editor.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS

Oil Lamps. Adding a pinch of salt to the oil when filling oil lamps will cause them to burn more brilliantly.

Rubber Boots. When rubber boots are not in use, keep them standing erect by rolls of cardboard. This will permit a free circulation of air and prevent them from cracking.

Another Economy. If your family is large and economical must be practiced in every direction, buy a pound of butter and a pound of margarine and mix them well. The blend will taste as well as the fresh butter and save you a great deal of money.

A Brush for Greasing. If you like to use a brush for buttering pans or muffin tins, buy a good brush with short bristles. Such brushes should be boiled after each using, and a cheap brush could not stand such severe cleaning without shedding its bristles.

For the School Lunch. If the kiddie has to take her lunch to school, a little surprise each day will make the whole lunch basket seem more appealing. A small jelly tumbler with a lid can contain so many things that would delight the youngster and take away the thought that she is not at home.

Confessions of a Debutante

BY RUTH AGNES ABELING

INSTALLMENT NO. 8. "The Measure of a Wife."

WHO'S WHO IN THE STORY.

I, an erstwhile butterfly, destined to marry Jonathan Grey, fat, more than forty, and very rich.

My mother, who is ambitious. My father, whose name I do not know, whom I love but have refused to wed. Friday, December 8.

It is only a day since I set down the last words but it seems as if a whole year had passed.

Jonathan was sitting hunched in the corner of the gold leaf adorned settee when I went down. He always sits so—hunched. Somehow he reminds me of a huge dynamo in which the power is finally at rest.

He got to his feet as I came into the room and handed me a bunch of pink roses with an orchid in the center. He tried to smile. His heavy lips pulled into a possessive leer.

"I have the ring," he said without the least emotion.

He opened the case and gave me first the ring he had taken for the jeweler to get the size from, and then lifted from the folds of white velvet another circlet. It was formed by the slender curve of his body, two golden sirens, whose four hands held an enormous sapphire in place.

The strange beauty of the thing held me wordless for a second.

"It's lovely," I whispered, not daring to touch it.

Jonathan Grey picked up my left hand and slipped the sapphire into place on the third finger. Then he stood away eyeing it critically.

It seemed that I stood there fully five minutes while he looked at me, apparently measuring me with his eyes as would a window trimmer when selecting the particular figure on which to display his choicest gown.

"There," he said at length. "I couldn't have made a better choice—now you should have a necklace to match that; I'll get it. You'll need some smart new gowns—I went today to look at gowns for the interiors at Park avenue."

Gowns—hanging—these on the night of my engagement! I laughed foolishly. The figure before me seemed to take on something monstrous, frightful. I turned, looked with an impulse to escape. I looked back a second and then rushed out of the room and on out of the house.

The light from the upstairs sitting room slanted across the snow-covered plot. I glanced up. Mother and father were sitting there. I knew; perhaps at that very moment talking of my future as Jonathan Grey's wife.

It was cold. I had no wrap. I drew the long loose sleeves of my velvet frock tightly around my arms and hugged my body. I couldn't go back in. Jonathan would be coming out in a minute. There would be loud words, a scene. Mother would appear. How should I explain it?

I hurried off down the drive. A chill wind from the river flapped my skirts about my legs. An automobile was coming toward me. I was blinded by the glare of lights. The car passed, slackened its speed, turned and drew in toward the curb. It barely moved beside me. My heart pounded. I wanted to run. My legs refused to move faster. They seemed suddenly like cotton, ready to give way beneath me.

Instinctively I knew that there was a man in the car—a man alone. There was borne in on my consciousness, as I moved dizzily along, a vague familiarity about the whole thing. It confused me.

A low musical whistle sounded. I knew that whistle!

Then: "Girly!" I knew that voice!

I rushed to the curb. Not waiting for the motor to stop I flung myself over the low door and landed in a tumbled heap on the seat beside the driver.

BY ANGELO PATRI

Author of "A Schoolmaster in the Great City," Principal Public School 45, The Bronx.

God very evidently intended that each of us should have within the ready materials for solitary happiness. That is why, I take it, that He started the human family in a garden and furnished each of us with eyes and ears and nose and hands and voice and taste.

They pile up a treasure store that nothing in the world can hope to equal. One can shut the doors on the world and they that dwell therein and have a beautiful time telling it over, crooning over its beauties and rejoicing in the abounding wealth of it. That is, of course, if one has used his senses to gather the treasure.

And that brings me to noses. The smells of things makes a very sharp memory. They seem to weave themselves into the richest and most poignant of our emotions and to endure long after the memories of sight and sound.

A whiff of mignonette, and there comes a series of memories as clear and alive as the day we stood in the dew-sprinkled garden and stored them away in layers of sunshine and soft floating clouds and sweet companionship.

The piney odor of a broken box brings with it the whole north woods, and one is off to the long silences and the woody smells. One senses anew the drowsy perfume of young hemlock in the sun, swallows thirstily as the choky odor of the sassafras fills the nose, and draws long intakes of the perfume that rises from the groundings, a rich blend of pennyroyal and mint and wild thyme and damp moss strewn with pine needles.

Follow your nose and it leads to a blessed, restful sweetness. That is, if when you were young, somebody who loved you and wanted very much to bestow great riches upon you and endow you with imperishable wealth, took you by the hand and led you to the fields and woods and waters.

Took you to where the wind carried the scent of the earth to your nostrils and showed you the way to smell out the secrets of the growing things. Gathered and placed in your hand the sweetsmelling things of field and garden and forest. Taught you to draw deep breaths of the sea-scented air and to sniff the delicate odors of wee white violets. All this was yours, if somebody loved you enough.

Sometimes I fear that the children are losing the power to smell. Perhaps that is because most of the children I meet are city reared and have had to cease to smell in self protection. Hot pavements and gasoline and defiled rubbish were not among the odors of that first garden and the children of men turn from them.

But are there to be none other for them? If there is no other way, have the sweet-smelling things that grow gathered and sent to you from time to time, so that the children may get a whiff of their fragrant inheritance. Give them a knowledge of and a taste for the sweet, clean smells. You'll be doing more than you dream of for them when you do.

And when you are selecting a summer camp for the children, that they may get their bit of outdoor education, ask the director what provision he has made for the nosings of the children. Can he teach them to smell their way to a pine grove? To water? To camp fire? Will they be able to follow their noses a little way on the trail of the earth's sweetness? It leads to health and safety and happiness. Much happiness.

CHAPTER XLIX.

A Wordless Message.

The idea of going to Nassau appealed strongly to Cynthia. She and Roger had usually taken their winter vacations in the north, as they were fond of winter sports, and although she had always wanted to go to the tropics, southern California was the nearest that she had come to them. She wanted, too, to run away from all that life had been, and to feel that she was beginning anew.

When she went home to pack her belongings Monica, who had been staying at Margaret's, joined her.

"You're quite sure that you don't want to go with us, Monica?" she asked. "I'm a little worried about going off and leaving you with those friends of yours—and of course if you'd like to come—"

"Oh, I wouldn't leave New York now for anything!" Monica exclaimed. "I love it here. Why nobody should want to rush off to a place where there are no theaters and dance clubs is beyond me! And you forget, too, that I have a fiance here."

"Oh, of course," Cynthia replied rather vaguely, bending over the hat trunk which she was locking. Monica laughed softly.

"You've never thought that I cared much for Philip, have you, Cynthia?" she asked. "Well, I don't—but I care as much for him as I could for any man. And we get along beautifully together. I think we'll have a June wedding."

"Oh, that would be lovely, Monica!" Cynthia exclaimed. "I'll try my best to make it the prettiest wedding of the season. You could have it outdoors, and—oh, it will be beautiful!"

Cynthia wondered if Monica had had any news of Roger, but her pride would not let her ask. She did not know whether he knew that she was going to Nassau; she had sent a note to him at his office, but had had no reply. But when she went to the steamer on which they were to sail, she found in her stateroom a great box of sunset roses, her favorite flower, with his card tucked in among the pinkish-yellow blossoms. She lifted them to her face and kissed them softly, her eyes filled with tears.

Lucille came dancing in just then, her arms full of huge, spicy smelling carnations.

"From Roger—wasn't that sweet of him?" she cried. "And there's a note that says, 'Hope you have a wonderful time! Roger's a dear, isn't he? Ted sent me flowers, too—but Roger's are nicer! Come on up on deck. We're going to start in a minute now.'"

Monica saw them off, with Philip Harris playing background for her. Cynthia felt uneasy whenever she looked at the girl, she felt that Monica was concealing something from her, but could not guess what it might be.

"She acts as if she knew something that I'd like to know, and enjoys keeping it from me," Cynthia reflected. "Oh, well—if it's important I'll find it out sometime. I suppose, 'Hope sometime' won't be too late!"

A final blast of the bugle warned those who were not sailing to go ashore, and as the ship got under way Cynthia went below. She did not want to stand there on deck, waving to the crowd on the dock, when Roger

PACKARD CHIEF
SEES PROSPERITY
IN ALL BUSINESS

An unprecedented era of prosperity for the motor industry, with a general inflation in all business lines for 1923, is seen by Alvan Macauley, president of the Packard Motor company, who spent Monday with his brother-in-law, L. Z. Gilbert, of Jonesboro, while returning to Detroit from Savannah, where he has been on a 10-day hunting trip.

Prior to his connection with the Packard company, Mr. Macauley was president of the Burroughs Adding Machine company. He reports a very successful hunting trip and is very much impressed with the south and southern hospitality. He states that conditions have practically reached a normal plane in Detroit, and feels that a complete readjustment in prices of basic commodities and other essentials is pending.

"SHUT-EYED" KISS
CHARGED TO MOVIE
STAR BY ACTRESS

Los Angeles, Calif., January 22.—Dorothy Clark, 19-year-old dancer and movie actress, took the stand in Judge Wood's court Monday to tell her story of her alleged "betrayal" by Herbert Rawlinson, motion picture actor, whom she is suing for $200,000 damages.

Dorothy told of her meeting with Rawlinson in New York in 1918, and some Christmas cards on which the actor was alleged to have written, "to my darling little sweetheart, Dorothy," were presented as evidence.

Then the girl told how Rawlinson had later kissed her.

"Once he closed his eyes when he kissed me," she said. "At that time I attached no significance to the fact that his eyes were closed, but now—"

Here Dorothy sobbed dramatically, and closed her own eyes to convey to the jury the worldly sophistication needed to understand a "shut-eyed kiss."

Rawlinson's fate will be decided by a jury of seven women and five men.

SMITH NOT COMING
Creator of Gumps Unable to Attend Bureau Dinner.

Sidney Smith, widely known cartoonist and creator of the famous "Gump" family, which appears on the comic sheet of The Constitution, will be unable to attend the annual banquet of the Atlanta Convention bureau tonight, it was announced Monday.

The convention bureau received a telegram from Mr. Smith Monday, stating that business engagements in Chicago would prevent his coming to Atlanta.

The dinner is scheduled for 6:30 o'clock, on the Ansley roof garden. Many attractive features, including a "vaudeville show," have been arranged.

Umbrella handles are now made detachable so that the handle may be changed to match the costume.

The polka was originally a Bohemian peasants' dance.
